Kohler's Name To Remain On Ballot, Court Rules CITY DENIED REHEARING IN TAX CASE

LAW OBEYED BY DAMMANN, IS DECISION

Secretary of State Only Did
Duty in Certifying Name of Candidate
Citizens Amply Protected by State Law Against Any Misconduct

Madison—(P)—Walter J. Kohler will not have to fight for his nomination as governor before the state supreme court. That tribunal Tuesday denied the plea of Fred M. Wyle for an alternative writ of mandamus calling on Theodore Dammann, secretary of state, and Mr. Kohler, to show cause why the latter's name should not be removed from the ballot, or to remove the name without argument.

The high court held, in line with the arguments of the attorney general, that the secretary of state, Theodore Dammann, had performed a legal and purely ministerial function in certifying the name of Walter J. Kohler to the county clerks for them to place on the November ballot.

Acting Chief Justice M. A. Rosenberry, read the court's decision on Monday, saying that it was not the legislative intent to charge the secretary of state with power and duty to investigate the correctness of expense accounts filed by the candidates, and only certify the nominations in accord with the findings of the matter.

It is considered that it was not the legislative intent or purpose by the provisions of Section 12.10 to charge the secretary of state with the duty and invest him with the power to conduct an examination to determine whether or not a statement filed by a candidate for office was in all respects correct and to certify or to decline to certify the name of the nominee in accordance with his findings. If the secretary of state finds on file in his office a statement such as required by the statute, it becomes his plain duty to issue the certificate pursuant to Section 6.12. In this case the secretary of state has made such determination and evidence the same by issuing the certificate in accordance with the provisions of Section 6.12.

The people in whose behalf the petition was presented are not without remedy. All candidates are required to file statements which become public documents. If any candidate has been guilty of misconduct the people may register their disapproval thereof at the polls on election day. If the candidate in the language of the statute (Sec. 12.24) has "violated any provision of this chapter" he may be required to answer in the manner and form there provided. If his misconduct is of such a character as to bring in question the title to his office it elicits all questions may be raised at the proper time in an ordinary way at a complete remedy afforded. The evident purpose of Section 12.10 is to coerce the candidate to make and file a statement, not to invest the secretary of state with power to nullify the action of the electorate at the primary election.

Several thousand persons were on hand to bid the craft adieu. The dirigible, on its way back, was met by a large crowd of spectators. POLITICS IS ALL MUDDLED FOR HOOSIERS

Democrats Hope to Win
Governorship—Careful
About Backing Al

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1928, by Post Pub. Co.
Indianapolis—Indiana is not exactly a doubtful state this year but it certainly can be classed among the most peculiar.

Having a lot of irregularity and corruption in Republican rule, for several years the protest inside the Republican party has been growing and has expressed itself this year in a definite movement to elect a Democrat for governor. Conflicts of local politics have their bearing on the national situation. Thus, the feeling is so bitter that some Republicans who are anxious and willing to contribute money to finance the Hoover campaign in the state have stipulated that none of their funds shall go toward helping the Republican candidate for governor.

The opposition is not so much to the Republican nominee, Harry Leslie, but to the organization which placed him in nomination—namely, that of Governor Jackson.

DEMOCRATS STAND APART
Inside the Democratic party, there is another peculiarity. The Democrats realize that in Frank Dailey they have a strong candidate for governor and are very anxious to get him elected. The estimates as to the majority for Hoover vary from a hundred thousand to a million. The more conservative are figuring on a hundred thousand majority, but some Hoover enthusiasts say they will be disappointed at a minimum of not less than a hundred fifty thousand, and they are talking of something much higher than that as a likelihood.

LEGION STEERING GROUP MEETS AT SAN ANTONIO

San Antonio, Tex.—(P)—The Wisconsin delegation to the American Legion convention here Monday appointed a steering committee for the delegation and was scheduled to meet late Tuesday afternoon for a discussion of legion politics.

CHIPPEWA FALLS MAN'S BODY FOUND IN RIVER

Milwaukee—(P)—The body of Conrad Barthel, 35, Chippewa Falls, Wis., has been found in the Chippewa river here Saturday. Relatives notified by the police at Chippewa Falls, Wis., said the man had been missing for several days. The body was found by a fisherman who had been fishing in the river. The man was found with his head under a log. The police are now trying to identify the man.

Poison Liquor Kills 32 New Yorkers In 3 Days

New York—(P)—City and federal authorities joined Tuesday in seeking the source of the poison liquor that in three days has taken 32 lives. Acting under orders from Police Commissioner Warren, police raided 13 alleged speakeasies on the lower east side where most of the deaths occurred, samples of the seized liquor were sent to the city toxicologist for analysis and the owner or person in charge of each place arrested.

Driver Of Death Car Is Nabbed

Police Say Prisoner Admits Killing Two and Failure to Stop

Elkhorn—(P)—Fred J. Boone, 28, of Janesville, alleged "hit-and-run" driver, was arrested early Tuesday by a Walworth county deputy sheriff, ending a six months' search.

When apprehended on a Linn farm Boone admitted, according to authorities, that he was the driver of an auto that killed two persons at Richmond, Wis., on April 22. He also declared that his companion at the time of the fatal accident was Harold Wixon, 25, Janesville, who is awaiting trial in Rock-co on charges of chicken thefts.

Boone is being held on a warrant charging failure to stop and give aid after injury. Wixon, authorities declared, will be charged with being an accessory.

DON'T GIVE UP HOPE FOR MISSING WOMAN

Oshkosh—(P)—Although a wide-spread hunt for Mrs. J. A. Brees, 30, has been abandoned, searches for the missing wife of a music instructor at Oshkosh State Teachers' college were organized Tuesday. Start anew should clues to her whereabouts be brought to their attention.

HICKMAN FAILS TO GET SUPREME COURT HEARING

Washington—(P)—Efforts to obtain from a justice of the supreme court an appeal for William Edward Hickman at Los Angeles under sentence of death for the murder of Marian Barker were abandoned Tuesday after counsel for Hickman had vainly urged that he be brought up.

HIGHWAY LEVY MUST BE PAID, COURT RULES

Only Alternative Now Remaining Appeal to U. S.
Supreme Court

The Wisconsin supreme court Tuesday morning denied a motion of the city of Appleton for a rehearing on its appeal in the tax suit against Outagamie-co.

Unless the city now carries the case to the United States Supreme Court, Fred E. Bachman, city treasurer, will have to pay to the county treasurer the $100,483, plus interest, which he has been holding since the city started its suit alleging that the county board had illegally levied highway taxes in December, 1926.

The controversy between the county and city has been in the courts for at most two years, and since spring of 1927, when the money in question was collected, it has lain idle in a local bank awaiting final disposition of the case.

It has been intimated that the city will not carry the matter to the Supreme Court, but will let the controversy drop, and that Mr. Bachman will pay the funds to the county treasurer in the near future.

Mayor Hoan Says Kohler Bought Seat

Milwaukee Socialist Charges
"Open Buying of Public Office"

New York—(P)—Daniel Hoan, mayor of Milwaukee, in a statement issued Monday through the socialist national campaign committee, charged that Walter J. Kohler obtained the Republican gubernatorial nomination in Wisconsin through an illegal campaign.

"Wisconsin law provides that only a fraction of the salary attached to the office sought may be spent on the campaign for office," the statement said.

"Mr. Kohler spent in the neighborhood of a quarter of a million dollars on the face of it an open violation of the law took place, whether the investigation committee now at work probing Kohler's campaign expenditures can locate the evidence will depend upon its persistence.

WISCONSIN RAPIDS MAN NAMED WOOD-CO JUDGE

New York—(P)—Mrs. Arthur T. Stiller, 72, of the railroad building, 100 West 42nd street, jumped from the top of the building Tuesday morning, falling 40 stories to her death. The body was found on the roof of an adjoining structure.

BADGER STATE STILL PUZZLE IN ELECTION

Various Movements and Groups Make Vote of Wisconsin Uncertain

BY BYRON PRICE
Associated Press Staff Writer
Milwaukee—(P)—Old in the ways of political independence, Wisconsin continues to keep her statesmen interested and puzzled, even in a year when insurgency has become commonplace.

More than ever before, Wisconsin politics in 1928 is like a house, which has been remodeled year by year by many carpenters. At the moment further alterations are under way, and the workmen themselves seem hesitant to predict whether the house will be found on Nov. 6 to be facing east or west.

A feeling of gloom of the chief architects of the state's political destinies shows the young Senator LaFollette, heir to his father's leadership, running for reelection as the Republican nominee, on a platform that favors beer and the McNary-Haugen bill, and saying nothing about Smith or Hoover; LaFollette's Democratic opponent with drawing in his favor; his Republican colleague, Senator Blaine, refusing to support the party's presidential nominee; a reconstituted Republican state organization, headed by a gubernatorial nominee who won over LaFollette's opposition, seeking to rally the state's tremendous Republican majority under the Hoover banner; a Democratic committee doing what it can to promote the Blaine split; and this swing, 1928 state to Smith. Both sides are predicting victory but both are still hard at work.

BOY'S DEPARTMENT AT "Y" LOOKS FOR SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Membership Campaign Closes and Work Will Begin Under C. C. Bailey

With the closing of the boys' membership campaign Monday evening, the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. starts another year of activities which will mark the beginning of many new phases in boys' work, according to C. C. Bailey, boys' work secretary. With Mr. Bailey, newly appointed member of the local associations staff at the helm, it is expected the year will be one of the most successful ever experienced by the association.

The development of work among boys has been increasing from year to year, according to G. F. Werner, general secretary. While the association started to serve the needs of young men, primarily at its inception it was not long until it was evident that something needed to be done to further the interests of boys. By 1900 definite steps had been taken to give this phase of the work impetus, and during the following decade there was a phenomenal development of boys' work throughout the country.

Boys between the ages of 10 and 18 years are served in the boys' department, and today there are over 211,000 boys enrolled as members of the associations in the United States and Canada, according to Mr. Werner. There are probably as many more boys in cooperating groups, which are not members of the association but are served under the leadership of the Y. M. C. A.

The particular interest and needs of boys are being served through the Pioneer club, for boys up to the age of 15 years, while the comrade groups serve boys over 15 years, and the Hi-Y clubs are organized by boys in high schools. There are over 100,000 boys affiliated with Hi-Y clubs in the country.

Possibly one of the largest contributions of the boys' work phase of the association has been the impetus given camping. In this phase the association has been a real pioneer. An average of 70,000 to 80,000 boys attend approximately 400 Y. M. C. A. camps each year, according to Mr. Werner. More than $4,250,000 is invested in Y. M. C. A. equipment in this country.

ROSA PONSELLE TO SING IN APPLETON

Has Been Engaged to Appear Here in Community Artist Series

Rosa Ponselle, one of the most extensive single numbers the management of the Community Artist Series ever has attempted to bring before the Appleton public will close the five-number artist series to be presented during the winter season in Appleton.

Rosa Ponselle, the world's greatest dramatic soprano, made her debut when she was 21 and by the time she was 31 she had distinguished herself in Metropolitan Opera. Her romantic rise from a vaudeville singer to a Metropolitan opera star was the result of everything that an artist could possess—musical training, musical susceptibility, the dramatic power to assume the spiritual form of any one of a thousand differing individuals, and a great voice. All these things have combined to make her known to the American public as the "greatest singing artist of our time."

Other attractions on the season's program are Edward Johnson, tenor, who will open the series on Nov. 9; the Toscha Seidel Trio; Andres Segovia, Spanish guitarist; and Alexander Brailowsky, Russian pianist.

INDIANA ALL MIXED UP ABOUT POLITICS

of Smith sentiment in Lake-co. in the northern part of the state, which has an industrial population. This county, together with Marion co., is relied upon as a rule for large Republican majorities. The Republican organization last week sent scouts to the northern part of the state to find out why several Republicans were organizing Smith-for-president clubs among the Negroes.

There has been the usual shifting in this state, due to religious issues, and that is why Governor Smith will poll better than the normal vote.

M'NARY BILL SMITH AID
While the McNary-Haugen bill is not in any sense a large issue, it is contributing somewhat to the Democratic cause in rural districts where ordinarily the Democrats have no chance. This may be overbalanced by the large Hoover vote in the country due to the prohibition issue and the Ku Klux Klan. This is one of the states in which the Klan has had an unusual hold and Governor Smith's chances on that account are correspondingly weak.

The New York governor has not been here yet but is expected to make a speech soon. His partisans are active. In fact, the Democratic organization shows more signs of life and unity than it has for many years. Some of the leaders privately say that they think Governor Smith has a good outside chance of carrying the state. They are basing this on the expectation of a strong drift toward Governor Smith, in the closing weeks of the campaign.

There are some neutral observers who think the Republican estimates are too rosy and that a fifty thousand majority for Hoover would seem to be a more reasonable estimate. It is generally conceded that if Mr. Hoover carries the state by only 50,000, the Republican state ticket will be lost in the shuffle. Anyway both Republicans and Democrats agree that Mr. Hoover will not run as strongly as did Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Harding. This is almost entirely due to Governor Smith's strength as a vote-getter and the prospect that he will absorb a good part of the LaFollette vote of 1924.

WATSON NOT BITTER
The Republican primary campaign, which found Messrs. Hoover and Watson contending for the state, had almost entirely left any scars. The senior senator from Indiana is campaigning regularly for Mr. Hoover. Indeed the talk in political circles is that the Hoover organization is not in any sense a rival of the state Republican organization and that desperate efforts are being made by the regular state leaders to make a better working arrangement with the Hooverites. The last step in that direction was an agreement whereby all sums in excess of a certain amount of money raised for the Hoover clubs would be turned in to the national committee for much distribution in the state as might be determined by the national committee. It is assumed that some of that money will find its way into the hands of the state organization and will mean help to the state ticket. The problem is what will Mr. Hoover do, if elected, when the rival organizations present their recommendations for appointments. It is a difficulty he may encounter in other states, too, and is one of the unfortunate sequels of the primary fight, but the original Hoover men are saying "Sufficient unto the day"—they want to win the state for Hoover first.

JUNIOR SCHOOL TO SPONSOR PROGRAM

Magician Will Appear on First of Series of Entertainment Courses

The annual entertainment course given at Wilson junior high school for student and public, will open this year with a program by De Jen, the magician, who will present Counterfeit Miracles on Wednesday.

De Jen exposes many of the tricks of fraudulent mediums and presents them in an entertaining manner, showing how ridiculous such things can be when shown in the light, stripped of their mystery.

Press reports of De Jen state that "what Herrmann and Keller were to the days of horses and buggy, De Jen is to this age of Aerostatics. He was the first to depart from the old school of mystery. His independence of thought and ingenuity enabled him to keep pace with a modern world, resulting in his being the foremost exponent of a new era in the art of mystery. He has created a new style in harmony with progress and modern thought, affording a mental stimulus to an entertainment-loving public."

The Caveny company, composed of a crayon artist, a modeler in clay, a soprano and a pianist, has been booked for the second number of the Wilson school series.

CABBAGE CROP IS NORMAL BUT PRICE CONTINUES HIGHER

Late Crop Expected to Lower Price from $10 to $8 or $9 Per Ton

The cabbage crop in Outagamie-co is about normal this year as compared with crops of other years but the price is considerably higher because of recent heavy rains damaging the early crop, according to county farmers and wholesale men. It is probable that with the harvesting of the late crop, the present price of early cabbage may drop from $10 a ton to somewhat near last year's price, which ranged between $8 and $9.

The price paid county growers last week was $10 a ton. The quantity and yield of cabbage are as satisfactory to the grower, as is the price, according to some farmers. Deliveries of early cabbage at the present rate of harvesting will continue for another week or ten days. It is not likely that the storing of late cabbage will begin in this locality before the close of two weeks. Late cabbage was selling at $14 a ton last week.

Late cabbage in other counties ranged from $17 to $20 a ton. These prices caused cabbage growers who had not finished silo filling to do some sharp hustling in their cornfields in order to lose no time starting the harvesting of late cabbage as it to get the fair prices offered. Other growers who were through with their corn and hauling cabbage to shipping stations, were out employing more help in the cabbage fields and started to speed up their harvest.

DAMAGED CROP

Early cabbage a month ago was in excellent condition and the heads appeared to be solid, but since recent heavy rains flooded fields the crop suffered and shattered many farmers' hopes for a bumper yield. The quality of late cabbage throughout the county, however, is excellent and farms are getting from 10 to 12 tons to the acre in fields in which growing conditions were the most favorable. Cabbage in low fields, that at times were covered with water, does not come anywhere near this average and hence the present increase in price.

Arnold Brothers' Pickling and Preserving company at Shiocton, has handled 4,000 tons of early cabbage this fall and expects to take in 1,000 tons of late cabbage. While the company prepares most of the cabbage give evidence of a demand in the east, South and west. Storing of late cabbage, although well underway at some cabbage stations probably will move at a fast pace the latter part of this week, according to dealers.

A Lecture

Christian Science

Entitled
Christian Science:
The Power of Good

By
Paul A. Harsch, C. S. B.

Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston Mass.

In Lawrence Memorial chapel Monday evening Oct. 8 under the auspices of First Church of Christ Scientist Appleton Wis.

In the text book of Christian Science, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, Mary Baker Eddy, its author, thus defines Good: "God; Spirit; omnipotence; omniscience; omnipresence; omnibenevolence." (Pg. 587) and it is proposed to present the subject of Christian Science here from this standpoint, that is, of good and its power—power inherent in it, constantly being manifested by it, and inevitably lifting mankind upward and onward to God.

DESIRABILITY OF GOOD
Deep seated in the heart of every one of us there dwells a desire to know more about good, a yearning to attain to the secret place of the Most High, to that point of understanding whereby good may be brought more largely and more specifically into daily experience and there retained and used.

JOYOUSNESS OF GOOD
Whittier reminds us, "That all of good the past hath had remains to make our own time glad" and this dominant note of gladness always accompanies the refrain of good. To illustrate: Life, Christian Science teaches, is God, good. Admittedly it is good to express life in a full, free and vigorous way and to do so is a joyous thing. Could it be possible to imagine a condition more joyous than to be free forever from all sense of weariness; to be absolutely devoid of anxiety; of every thought of sickness and distress; to have no consciousness of a life that must terminate sometime; to dwell consciously in the presence of Life which is all good? Would not this be heaven, eternal joy?

THE ROAD TO HEALTH
Now herein, is seen the power of good, viz.: that every statement and every conclusion based upon it or emanating from it, leads only to health, happiness, genuine success, permanent peace, longevity, and above all, usefulness. This is sufficient reason for holding to this basic fact so persistently that our consciousness is constantly filled with good so that neither thought of disease, misery, failure, discord, or even death itself, can find entrance. With such thoughts denied admission it follows in a perfect sequence that none of these claims to an evil power can express themselves in the bodily experience of one depending resolutely on the power of ever-present good, God.

AVAILABILITY OF GOOD
The instant availability of good is a continual source of joy and thankfulness. With outstretched arms, the omnipresent, omnipotent Father-Mother Love, to use the exquisite name Mrs. Eddy gives us for God, is always at hand to meet every human need. No experience, however extraordinary may be the demand, however terrifying the fear, but this good God is ready and waiting to protect and deliver.

DESIRE FOR GOOD
Now primarily, the desire for good,—for the guidance and control of all intelligent Mind, God, must exceed all other desires. The seeker for divine good must be able to say with David, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Such desire is prayer. A prayer that is always answered. There are no exceptions.

The prayer which begins with a paean of thanks to an eternally good Father-Mother God, that there neither is nor can be in reality such a thing as disease in His infinitely good universe; the prayer which continues with thankfulness that evil by whatever name or nature it may present itself to consciousness, has no power, intelligence, nor power and which concludes with rejoicing to use an infinitely good God orders His universe in such perfection, is certain to have a perfect answer. This prayer of faith and spiritual understanding, this conscious desire for a larger sense of good, contains within itself the seed of universal salvation.

With the clear and correct understanding of prayer which constitutes so large a part of the mental equipment of every Christian Scientist he is enabled to bring a large measure of good into his own experience and that of others. Indeed it is in this way precisely that his salvation is attained. Scriptural injunctions to work out our own salvation are numerous. The Christian Science text book quotes these with approbation and insists upon the necessity of working out our own salvation in the way Jesus taught. It may be pertinent therefore to ask what salvation is and what it consists? In many, if not in all Christian churches, salvation is defined as "liberation from the bondage and results of sin." Let us then consider it from but one of many possible viewpoints, that from which we are discussing the question of Christian Science namely, the power of good to save, to deliver, from sin and its bondage.

To experience salvation from the results of so-called sin whether in the form of sickness, disease, discord, lack, misery, fear, unhappiness, loneliness, it must be utterly abandoned—forsaken. Its false pleasures discarded. It must be seen that it produces no satisfaction and that it produces the destruction, consequently is wholly undesirable. A realization of the powerlessness of sin to produce anything having even the semblance of good must precede the rejection of the belief of its power to produce any form of evil.

HEALING BY THE CHRIST METHOD

Freed from the fear of sin and from its indulgence by this process of right thinking, one living, the slave of evil finds the glow of hope and health taking possession of his entire being. His outlook upon life changes and his hope of ultimate salvation from every form of aggressive evil is enhanced. To illustrate: Jesus frequently pointed out this method of salvation, indicating to many a discouraged sufferer of his day that it was the destruction and forgiveness of sin which resulted in healing; he thus proved himself the true way shower.

This confident message of good is the message of Christian Science. It is the message of Jesus repeated again. It comes with the same degree of authority and force that accompanied its presentation to the consciousness of men from the very beginning of recorded history. It is the message of the Christ. Truth has always been available but it has not always been used. From the dawn of history 'til now, however, there have been innumerable instances of its potent application.

THE GREATEST BOOK IN THE WORLD

What a storehouse of inspiration is the Bible! "The greatest Book in the world." It has been called. Thomas Huxley once said of the King James Bible, that is, our commonly used authorized version, "For three centuries this book has been woven into all that is noblest and best in English history, and it abounds in exquisite beauties of literary form." Thomas Jefferson speaking more particularly of his own compilation of portions of the New Testament, gave this as his opinion: "A more beautiful or precious morsel of ethics I have never seen: it is a document in proof that I am a real Christian, that is to say, a disciple of Jesus."

This is the book that Mrs. Eddy loved as no other book. From earliest childhood she studied it, pondered its precepts and guided her life by its rules and standards. For three years after her discovery of Christian Science, which occurred in 1866, she lived constantly with her Bible, seeking through its inspired pages to find the Science of the Christ healing which had come into her experience. It was her only text book and she describes this quest as most joyous, uplifting and beautiful. This was a logical result of her training and environment as well as her own natural inclination. Through those busy years she was being prepared in countless ways for the stupendous work that was to be hers in later life. Many of her close associates were men and women of deep learning and great religious intuition. Her whole tendency was along these lines and it was not strange that she should have been led in due time to the great discovery of Christian Science.

After this discovery, that is from 1866 to 1910, Mrs. Eddy's life was one of unremitting labor — a labor of unselfish love — a labor to establish the Science she discovered and loved. Throughout her long and busy life she never spared herself. Her love and devotion were invincible. The result of this devotion to God, good, and His power is seen today in the rapid growth of Christian Science through the world. The appeal of Christian Science is universal, as the appeal of good always must be, its influence upon those who embrace and practice its teachings is always beneficial and its well organized plan for extension and for redemptive work among all mankind is freely acknowledged as one of Mrs. Eddy's outstanding accomplishments.

The universality of good is illustrated by the entire Christian Science movement, broad and yet so varied in its phases that none seeking good through its channels need be disappointed. By means of a simple but complete and perfectly operating group of activities provided by Mrs. Eddy, this Christly movement proceeds on its redemptive way.

May we not sum up the whole subject of good and its power, as revealed by Christian Science, in this way: God is, God is good God is omniscient good. God is omnipresent good. God is omnipotent good. This my friends is the refrain of this entire discussion, with this additional thought, that "He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him."

Our joyous purpose then should be to search and seek, more car-neatly than before, for a larger faith, a deeper humility, a clearer insight into good, that we may express in daily thought and deed more of that goodness that is of God alone.

CHRISTIANITY IS FACING DOWNFALL

Eau Claire Pastor Believes Institution Will Become Religious Exercise

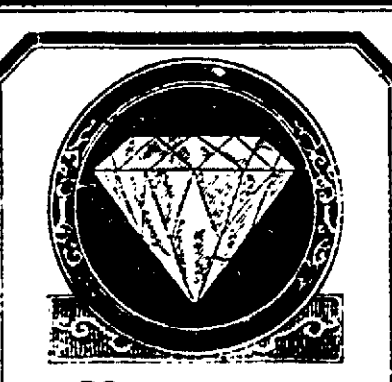

Washington—(AP)—Christianity in the United States is in danger of "degenerating to a specialized religious exercise" confined to a church building one day each week, Dr. Frank E. Wilson, rector of Christ church, Eau Claire, said in an address before a joint meeting of the national conventions of the Brotherhood of the King, Episcopal organization, in session here.

After speaking of modern amusements and the disappearance of the once dominant home life, Dr. Wilson stated these changes have brought the church face to face with a problem which may bring its downfall.

To remedy the situation, Dr. Wilson said an approach can be made through the correct religious teaching of children; avoidance of the pagan commercialism of Christian feast days; familiarity with religious books and papers, and by fighting the divorce evil.

Kehler, a millionaire manufacturer, as Republican candidate for governor over the direct opposition of the LaFollette wing of the party. It was followed by refusal of the Republican national committee to seat a LaFollette follower, Herman L. Ekern, as national committeeman, and recognition in his place of George Vits, Manitowish, former president of the Wisconsin Manufacturers association. To complete the reconstruction of the party machinery, the national committee has placed active management of the Hoover campaign in the hands of Stephen J. McMahon, a Kehler backer, who sits as chairman of the "Wisconsin Hoover-Curtis campaign committee."

McMahon has just opened his offices here in Milwaukee, and says he proposes "to conduct a comprehensive, progressive, efficient campaign, and carry the state for Hoover by a satisfactory majority." His committee counts confidently on considerable help from those who previously have followed LaFollette. Its campaign is based on such appeals as an exposition on the Republican tariff and economic policies, a recital of Mr. Hoover's accomplishments as an administrator, and a denial that Governor Smith can make effective his ideas about prohibition.

POINT TO CONGRESS

Hoover speakers are quoting Smith's Omaha declaration that the president can do nothing about the dry statutes, and McMahon's headquarters have put out posters, in both English and German, saying that of the 195 Democrats in his present house of representatives, but 47 could be expected to vote for liberalization of the Volstead act.

The opposition effort to consolidate the Democratic and LaFollette vote behind Smith, proceeding just now under the added inspiration of the nominee's recent visit to Milwaukee. Its central figure among the Democrats is John M. Callahan, the national committeeman, who was Smith's pre-convention campaign manager for Wisconsin. He has been claiming the state for the Democratic ticket ever since the Houston convention. Associated with him are the officials of the "Al Smith clubs," who say they have branches in every county, including in their membership both Republicans and Democrats. The third element in the situation is the "Progressive Republican" movement for Smith, whose headquarters at Madison are captained by Frank Kuehl, former secretary to Senator Blaine, and now on leave from his post as Republican assistant attorney general of the state.

Wisconsin also is one state where the Socialist vote has been a considerable factor. In 1920 the Socialist vote has been a considerable factor. In 1920 the Socialist presidential nominee, Eugene V. Debs, polled 85,000 votes in the state. Four years ago the Socialists endorsed LaFollette, but this year the party again has a nominee of its own—a fact which party analysts do not forget when they are figuring on the verdict of the electorate in Wisconsin four weeks from today.

BUTTER MARKETING WILL BE DISCUSSED AT INSTITUTE

3-DAY SESSION TO BE DEVOTED SOLELY TO CO-OP METHODS

Wisconsin Potato Show Will Be Held Oct. 22 to 26 at Rice Lake

Madison—(AP)—The forty-fourth season of farmers' institutes, will open in the state when a three-day session devoted entirely to the co-operative methods of butter is held at Washburn, Oct. 17-19.

Two of the main avenues through which dairy profits can be increased, namely, ordering marketing and quality products, will be discussed at the meeting, states E. L. Luther, superintendent of the institutes. Representatives of leading co-operatives and specialists from the state college of agriculture will assist with the program.

"The opening of the season with a meeting of co-operative marketing seems particularly auspicious," remarks Luther, "as it represents the trends in the interest of the farmer. In the early days of this system of adult education, primary attention was directed toward improving production making two blades of grass grow where one grew before."

"During recent years the collective marketing of farm produce through associations controlled and operated by farmers has been given a prominent place on the programs of the institutes. Last year 144 of the sessions devoted to the marketing of specific products, such as tobacco, poultry and eggs, butter, cheese and livestock, were held in the state. The aggregate attendance at these meetings was more than 16,000."

AWARDS AT SHOW

Madison—(AP)—Potato growers of Wisconsin will compete on their season's records at the state potato show which will be held at Rice Lake, Oct. 22 to 26, according to J. G. Millward, secretary of the Wisconsin Potato Growers' association, which conducts the show, and a member of the horticultural staff at the University of Wisconsin.

Awards will be given for the first time, Mr. Millward has announced and adds that this new feature is in line "with the policy adopted by the management in recent years to make the show and exposition of the whole industry."

The association, according to the secretary, has gathered through extension and field agencies, information on various grower's work in seed potato improvement, success with fertilizers, work on disease and insect control, and the yield and quality standards.

In addition to the new feature, every organized phase of the potato growing industry will be on the show floor. Among the displays are listed standard variety classes, educational booths of the state departments, moving picture booths and Boys and Girls club departments, as well as a complete display of standard lines of machinery equipment and potato growers supplies.

At the same time as the potato exhibit, the Northern Wisconsin Corn and Grain show will be held, an arrangement that is proving pleasing to farmers in upper Wisconsin, according to Mr. Millward.

By holding the exhibitions together, Mr. Millward says they provide an exhibit and program of national importance to agricultural development in parts of the state, particularly in seed inspection, breeding, standardization and inspection.

FAIR DIRECTORS WILL BE ELECTED ON NOV. 4

Seymour—The annual meeting of the directors of the Seymour Fair and Driving Park association will be held Nov. 4. At this meeting the election of officers will take place, reports of officers will be made, and a program and budget for the 1929 fair will be considered. At a meeting of the directors and officers held on Sept. 19, it was decided to hold the 1929 fair from Aug. 18 to 21, inclusively.

"AG" STUDENT MUST PRACTICE THINGS TAUGHT IN CLASS

Agricultural Instructor at Shiocton High School Explains Purpose of Course

BY W. D. BROWNSON
Instructor of Vocational Agriculture at Shiocton High School

The other day a man stopped the agriculture instructor on the street and asked: "What is this vocational agriculture course I hear about?" Thinking that there may be others who have asked this thing, I am writing this in answer.

Vocational agriculture means learning and doing. The student in agriculture must put into some practice some of the things taught in the class room. The class room method is not a recitation, but a place of raising questions and discussing them, using authoritative references, farm magazines, bulletins, and personal experiences in drawing conclusions. Then the student conducts some home practice work under the supervision of the instructor and the parent. This directed practice work, or project work as it has been called, is the most important phase of the educational method. The student learns by doing. At the present time, when a student enters the high school and is in agriculture, he and the instructor with the cooperation of the parents develop some plan of directed practice work for the student which calls for four years of planning and endeavor. Each successive year calls for some further development of the work in which the student meets new problems and develops new skills. From his experiences in approved farm methods and practices, work in soil improvement, poultry, purebred seed grain, hog raising, potatoes, corn, and many other projects this year. Leslie Heiler, a Freshman student, is working in cooperation with Prof. Richards of the Soils Department of the University of Wisconsin in developing a four year program of soil improvement. Leslie receives instructions from Prof. Richards in regard to the use of fertilizers and lime on the land. A check strip is left in the four acre field so that the value of the soil treatment can be definitely computed and noticed. As this project develops we may find study here for many of Leslie's neighbors. Other students are developing grain and potato projects with Prof. Musbach of the Marshfield Experiment station.

TYPE OF WORK VARIES

The type of directed practice work varies. Students in the Shiocton department of vocational agriculture classes will conduct directed practice work in soil improvement, poultry, purebred seed grain, hog raising, potatoes, corn, and many other projects this year. Leslie Heiler, a Freshman student, is working in cooperation with Prof. Richards of the Soils Department of the University of Wisconsin in developing a four year program of soil improvement. Leslie receives instructions from Prof. Richards in regard to the use of fertilizers and lime on the land. A check strip is left in the four acre field so that the value of the soil treatment can be definitely computed and noticed. As this project develops we may find study here for many of Leslie's neighbors. Other students are developing grain and potato projects with Prof. Musbach of the Marshfield Experiment station.

Besides the long time projects developed by the boys, each boy is required to develop farm skills along several lines such as culling poultry, selecting seed corn, testing grains and seeds, treating seeds for prevention of disease, testing soil for acidity, etc. By actually doing these skills the student becomes acquainted with their technique and will actually do them when operating a farm for himself.

What do teachers of agriculture desire to accomplish with this Directed Practice Work? First of all, to actually train the boy in practical improved methods of farming; to encourage the boy in developing a business for himself, which in many cases develops into a Father and Son partnership and builds a strong community spirit. Each boy is required to keep quite accurate records of his work while in high school.

This trains him in methods of farm business methods and book-keeping which will result in the use of business methods in his farm work later on. Certainly, each boy doing such work should receive some compensation so departments of Agriculture hold the slogan "Earning While Learning" before the student while directing the work with the purpose of teaching methods of thrift.

Wittman Farm Is Most Attractive In County

BY W. F. WINSEY

One of the most attractive farm yards and group of farm buildings in this vicinity are those of George Wittman, route 7. Travelers often stop to inspect the vegetable garden on the west quarter of the yard, the loop driveway leading from the highway, and on either side with flowers, shrubbery, and the nicely painted building in the background.

In the large roomy residence are all the conveniences of the better class of city homes, including electric lighting, hot water heating, running water, fire places, sun porch and an inbuilt garage.

The floors of the stables are clean and the floors are often covered with lime. Concrete floors and gutters, drinking cups and steel stanchions are a part of the equipment of these stables. A Chicago milk inspector said recently that the Wittman stables were the cleanest and best kept that he had ever seen.

"The time we use on the floors of the stables not only destroys odors and keep the stables in a sanitary condition but we find it a splendid soil fertilizer afterwards when it is carried from the stables in the litter and spread on the fields," said Mrs. Wittman.

When the Wittmans took possession of their farm seven years ago there was nothing on the farm but an old house and a ramshackle barn and other out building. In a short time, they made a clean sweep of the old buildings and with the lumber salvaged put up their new modern buildings. "A new coat of paint every other year keeps our buildings looking like new," said Mrs. Wittman.

The main wing of their barn is 38 by 72 feet and the wing is 30 by 52 feet. As his chief farm occupation, Mr. Wittman is engaged in dairying with 21 head of cattle. He buys extra calves and usually has beef cattle for sale. As a side line he buys hay, and presses it for the market. He raises quantities of clover and alfalfa and has been raising sweet clover for hay and pasture the past seven years.

On a trip to Hawaii, California, Mexico, and Arizona, Mr. and Mrs. Wittman were very much impressed with the sugar plantations and flower gardens about Honolulu, and the irrigation farming and dairying of Arizona. They were surprised at vegetable and field crops they saw. The amount of under-paper growing of vegetable and field crops they saw. They came home with a resolution to do more and better dairying, to raise more flowers and shrubbery, and to keep their home and out buildings in "ship-shape" form.

SEDO HERD SETS PAGE IN ELLINGTON ASSOCIATION

With an average production of 681 pounds of milk and 29.6 pounds butterfat, for a test of 4.35 per cent, the Gus Sedo herd led the Ellington-Outagamie Herd Improvement association in production records in September, according to the monthly report of A. W. Dobberstein, Hortonsville, official tester. A grade Guernsey owned by Leonard Steinberz was the highest individual producer. Her record was 1,317 pounds milk and 50.3 pounds butterfat for a 4.5 per cent test.

There were 402 cows tested in the association last month, the monthly report indicates. Ten of this number produced more than 40 pounds of butterfat. Six cows were culled and sold for beef, five were sold for dairy purposes, and two bulls were bought.

The commonly disliked food is one of man's most useful foods, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in its gourmandish taste for all sorts of insects, most of them harmful.

28 BOYS ENROLLED IN FARM COURSES

Students at Shiocton School Prepare for Judging Contests at Madison

Shiocton—Twenty-eight boys are enrolled in the Vocational Agriculture courses this fall. This is a considerable increase over the number in last year's classes. Twelve sophomores are taking animal husbandry and sixteen freshmen are taking plant husbandry. Some of the junior boys are planning to take some work in farm mechanics.

Walter Locke, John Middleton, and Willard Winterfeldt with their demonstration on "Selecting the Dairy Herd Sire" won first place in the 4-H Club demonstrations at the Seymour fair, and were sent to the state fair as one of the county teams. At the state fair they placed sixth in competition with 37 teams. All the boys feel that the experience was well worth while. H. R. Last, their leader, accompanied them.

The "Bovina Township Booth" sponsored by the Agriculture Department won a total of $49 at the Seymour and Hortonville fairs. At the Hortonville fair it placed first. The present plans are to use this money towards distributing purebred corn and grains among the farmers in this community. It is planned to make this fund a permanent investment by distributing enough grain or corn of a standard variety among the boys in vocational agriculture. The boys receiving the grains will return a like amount to the department at harvest time, which will provide a supply for distribution the following year. A judge at one of the fairs gave the agricultural instructor a challenge by saying that it was up to his department to improve the grain department at that fair.

The boys in the agriculture classes are starting work for places on the judging teams to go to the state judging contests at Madison, Nov. 2 and 3. It was decided to take two teams this year: a livestock judging team, and a grain judging team from here this year.

"Since the settlement of the Mississippi Valley, the proportion of forest area in the basin of the Mississippi has been reduced from 40 to 20 per cent by necessary human use and by unnecessary abuse and neglect," says Associate Forester E. A. Sherman of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The commonly disliked food is one of man's most useful foods, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in its gourmandish taste for all sorts of insects, most of them harmful.

WARN TOBACCO GROWERS IN CURING OF CROPS

Madison—(AP)—Practically all of the state's tobacco crop was cut and in the shed when the first killing frost came this year, tobacco experts here said, while giving words of warning to tobacco farmers on the curing of their crops.

Tobacco men had been speeding their harvest work, because of indications that there would be frost soon, and they were generally successful in beating the weather.

The tobacco men here also said that tobacco growers who are also raising corn "are now head-over-heels in work getting the corn in" and in the silos before any great shrink occurs from damage caused by frost.

Weather being a great factor in the natural curing of Wisconsin crop and Wisconsin farmers having exercised little control over ventilation in their sheds, there has occurred more or less damage to the leaf hanging there.

15 COUNTIES ENTER LIVESTOCK CONTEST

More Than 100 Boys Will Attend Exposition at Madison Oct. 30

Madison—(AP)—Twelve other counties will contest at the night of Dane, St. Croix and Iowa counties to produce the grand champion steer of the Junior Livestock exposition held at the state agricultural college.

The 15 counties are sending more than 100 boys for the exposition October 30 and November 1, according to Arlie Mues, secretary of the Wisconsin livestock breeders' association, which sponsors the exposition.

tion. The counties represented, besides the three which have won in the past three years, are Grant, Richland, Pepin, Pierce, Rock, LaCrosse, Green, Juneau and Dodge.

"As this is the only fat stock project for juniors in the state, there is great rivalry between the counties and the agricultural teachers to take home the prizes that are being offered for the best steers, lambs and pigs," Mues said today.

The judges this year are John Robbins of Monroe, Indiana, for beef; William Miles, Evansville, for sheep; and Budie Dobson, Lanesville, for swine. Upon the decision of these three will rest the distribution of more than $2,000 in prizes that are being offered by the breeders' association and the specialists given by newspapers, packers, national and state breed associations, and others.

After the judging on the last day of the exposition, all the stock is sold at auction.

BADGER STATE LEADS IN HERDS ON HONOR ROLL

Memphis, Tenn.—(AP)—Wisconsin is in all the top ten of the union in the number of herds of dairy cows on the National Honor Roll for the 12 months past, figures just announced here by the National Dairy Association indicate.

Of the 8,112 herds in the country to make the grade, Wisconsin has 1,702 herds—against 1,436 last year. Michigan was runner up with 1,194 herds, Minnesota has 723.

Honor roll herds have five or more cows producing an average of more than 300 pounds of butterfat each year. The roll is made up from the records of Herd Improvement Associations, sponsored by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The herd improvement associations were created in order that dairy farmers might know which of their cattle are productive and which are unprofitable. S. H. Anderson, executive secretary of the National dairy association says.

Wild game and birds in New Hampshire alone return the state annually a value of at least $6,500,000 estimates W. C. Henderson, associate chief of the U. S. Biological Survey.

Mueller Herd Highest Association Producer

A herd of registered and high grade Brown Swiss cows owned by Emil Mueller topped the Black Creek and Cicero Herd Improvement association in average production records in September, according to the monthly report of William Yonkmann, herd improvement agent. The herd's record was 742 pounds milk and 28.4 pounds fat. The highest producing cow, a registered Holstein, owned by A. Allen, completed the month with 1,151 pounds milk and 45.2 pounds fat.

STUDENT JUDGING CONTEST PLANNED

Event Will Be Held Nov. 2 and 3 at State College of Agriculture

Madison—(AP)—"Judge not lest ye shall be judged,"

Boys at the state college of agriculture, on Nov. 2 and 3 will lose all regard for this biblical saying because they're to take part in a real judging contest.

This contest, to be held at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture each year, gives the boys a chance to show what they have learned at home and at school," said V. E. Kivlin, contest manager and member of the "ag" staff.

Last year 750 boys from 74 schools in the state made the trip to Madison, and this year the management expects even more to enter the tournament.

The program lists eight contests including judging livestock, poultry and eggs, crops, potatoes and apples, dairy products and meats. A singing contest and a farm mechanics test in soldering, rope splicing, knot tying, harness repairing, and other mechanical tasks with which the farmer is often faced will also be held.

Last year, according to contest directors, the singing contest was one of the most popular of the whole tournament, and this year more time will be devoted to it.

Singing will furnish a greater part of the entertainment at the banquet to be held Friday night, at which President Glenn Frank of the university will be the principal speaker. Saturday afternoon the boys will attend the Alameda-Wisconsin football game.

Skirts will, it is said, vary in length this summer. For outdoors wear they will remain short, and below the knee, while for evening frocks they may be down to the ankles, at the will of the wearer.

STOCK MARKET WARNING

Mr. John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, warns the public against the continued and almost unprecedented stock boom. He says that stock prices in a general way have greatly out-distanced actual values and earning ability. If that is the case it is largely a speculative market, and there is bound to be a reaction. Notwithstanding Mr. Raskob's admonition, market transactions continue to swell and soar. Last week brokers' loans reached a record total of $4,569,978,000, exceeding the previous high record of last June. Last week's loans represented an advance of approximately $50,000,000.

There is no mistaking the fact that the United States taken as a whole is highly prosperous, and that the outlook is exceedingly good. There is nothing discernible on which to predicate a recession of business. With both parties pledged to agricultural recovery, high wage policies and expansion of foreign trade, there is every reason why this country should continue to grow commercially and industrially and to increase the spread of prosperity. Nevertheless, stock prices appear to have reached a plane where they have discounted future possibilities and future earnings. That is neither the prudent nor sound course. By some means or other a bullish sentiment has radiated from Wall street into all parts of the country. If the facts are as Mr. Raskob says, prices are artificially high and powerful manipulations are at work to keep them high until there can be an unloading and profit-taking under cover without bringing on an immediate crash. It is, therefore, a good time to keep out of the market. Certainly it cannot be prudent to purchase stocks at prices far above their actual value and earning ability.

AUTOS, BUSES, RAILROADS

If you don't think that the automobile and the bus have given the railroad executives something to think about, consider these figures contained in the 1928 Yearbook of Railroad Information, just issued.

During 1927 class one railroads carried 829,845,522 passengers—fewer than were carried away back in 1911. Furthermore, during each of the last four years there has been a shrinkage in the total. The country is more prosperous and more populous than it was 16 years ago; but the railway passenger business is falling off.

Obviously, there is only one answer—the automobile.

It is interesting, however, to note that the bulk of this decline comes in the day coach business. Railway revenues from Pullman car passengers continue to rise. But whereas day coach receipts for 1921 were $795,402,216, in 1927 they had fallen to $534,222,334.

Small wonder that 'deluxe trains are being put on, with frequent excursion rates and plentiful advertising!

SLEEPING DURING SERMONS

Why do people go to sleep in churches?

The problem probably is as old as Christianity itself. In colonial days it was solved by having deacons prowl up and down the aisles with long, knobbed sticks, with which they tapped, sharply, the heads of all who dozed.

Dr. Edmund Jacobson of the University of Chicago has studied the question and thinks he knows the answer. Complete muscular relaxation, he says, brings with it relaxation of the thinking powers. The man who slumps down in his seat, inert and motionless as possible, cannot keep his senses alert. Consequently he fails to concentrate on the sermon, and goes to sleep.

We don't know just what the remedy should be. Apparently, however, the moral is that the body, as well as the mind, must be kept alert and responsive while in church. Otherwise some of the pastor's gems of wisdom are apt to go unheard.

CHINA AND RUSSIA

The recognition of China by the United States is natural and inevitable. The Nationalist government may not be much of a government, according to American and European standards, but it is the only government there is in a country which is the most populous, and one of the most important, in the world.

It is necessary for the United States, as a friendly neighbor across the Pacific, to be on good terms with China and maintain the proper machinery for transacting business with her. Promptness in extending it, too, gives our country an advantage over other western powers in Chinese good will. That is a valuable asset, for pleasant relations and for trade benefits. It also strengthens the new government at home.

"Now let us go ahead and recognize Russia," many will say. Possibly. But the conditions are somewhat different. It is just as desirable to be on good personal and business terms with Russia as with China, possibly more so. But the present government in Russia, though stronger than China's, has persistently meddled in the domestic affairs of other countries and shown itself untrustworthy and indifferent to its obligations and pledges. China has minded her own business and at least has tried to deal honestly with her neighbors.

THE VALUE OF BEAUTY

Nebraska, with its $10,000,000 capitol building at Lincoln still lacking 50 feet of tower and several acres of landscaping, asks its legislature to appropriate $2,000,000 to finish the project. Some citizens think it a costly and foolish undertaking. Most of them, especially those who have seen the new building, are ready to pay their share cheerfully. All accounts agree that this is one of the most beautiful structures in America, so lovely and in such perfect taste that architectural connoisseurs find it hard to believe such a building can rise from the prairies far from the older centers of culture.

It will pay amply, in values worth more than money. Such an edifice promotes civic pride, artistic taste, and elevation of soul. Public money is often wasted on public buildings; yet, from the best of them, thousands of men and women gain their first notions of architectural beauty. A capitol like the one at Lincoln is almost an artistic education in itself.

GOOD WILL VETERANS

There is a special fitness in holding the annual reunion this week of Spanish-American war veterans in Cuba. The presence of thousands of American veterans and their families in Havana this week will be a pleasant and reassuring experience for both the visitors and their hosts.

To Americans seeing Cuba for the first time it will be a revelation of the friendly warmth, charm and culture of this Latin-American neighbor. To the Cubans it will be a new reminder of the fact that the United States fought an unselfish war to give them their freedom.

This is something, indeed, which Cuba has never forgotten. There is one Latin-American country, at least, where Uncle Sam is not feared or disliked and American motives are not under suspicion.

Headlights can be a most glaring nuisance.

The Remedy is Worse Than the Malady

"DEMOCRATS ARE CERTAIN THEY'LL CARRY ARKANSAS," says a headline in the P-C. A good many Republicans are from Missouri, however.

Hoover isn't worried by his strenuous campaign and is getting a whole lot of fun out of it, a correspondent says. That's more than a score or more millions of American citizens can say. —Galahad Jiltine.

FULL-BLOODED

I heard a little fellow proudly detailing the merits of his German police dog one day last week, before a group of admiring urchins in front of a N. Onida-st home.

"And say," he said, after he had worked carefully to a climax, "he's full-blooded—ain't got no bones nor nothing!"

POINT OF VIEW

Harold the Seer was talking to a specialist last week: "I can't afford to be ill, he said.

"Why, does your job pay so much?" the physician asked.

"No, but yours does," the Seer answered.

A NEGRO WAS receiving bricks at the top of a ten-story building where some repair work was going on. Another negro on the ground was loading the bricks on the carrier.

The negro above accidentally dropped a brick, hitting the one on the ground squarely on the head.

He was indignant, and yelled to the one above: "Be a little more careful on dere, niggah. Dat brick hit me and made me bite ma tongue."

STRATEGY

He: "Tomorrow morning you will meet me at the Coney cafe."

She: "But suppose mother insists on coming with me?"

"She won't. I have invited her to meet me at the same time at the River restaurant."

Leo, official Tail Twister of the Appleton Lions, won a grunt when he sprung the following, lifted without apology:

"Can anyone in this class tell me the meaning of the word 'collusion'?"

No answer, so Al explained: "When two things come together unexpectedly, there is a collusion." Then he asked: "Now can anyone give me an example?"

SAFETY FIRST

Goldy, who came back from a trip to Chicago last week says it seemed more like old times than ever. While he was walking in the Loop district, someone's left rear tire blew out. For about a half block, Goldy says, everyone held his hands up, himself included.

"I always get a kick out of that sign," said the society editor, indicating a "Milk Station" placard at the roadside somewhere between Appleton and Milwaukee. The prohibition department should investigate.

Views Of The News

A LESSON IN LIFE-SAVING

Three-year-old Freddie Eaton of Boston is alive today only because his mother and his grandfather are people of extraordinary energy and decision.

Freddie tumbled in the water of Dorchester bay while playing with other children on a deserted dock. One of the children ran a quarter of a mile to the boy's home and told Mrs. Eaton. She ran at top speed to the water, jumped in without stopping to remove her heavy clothing, swam to her son's floating body and brought him ashore.

On the dock was waiting the boy's grandfather, Seth Eaton, aged 62. The boy was unconscious and had stopped breathing. The grandfather began first aid measures. For half an hour they seemed without effect. Then, at last, the boy's eyes flickered open, a flush began to appear in his cheeks, and he lived.

The grandfather promptly picked him up and ran the quarter-mile distance to the house, where the mother called a doctor.

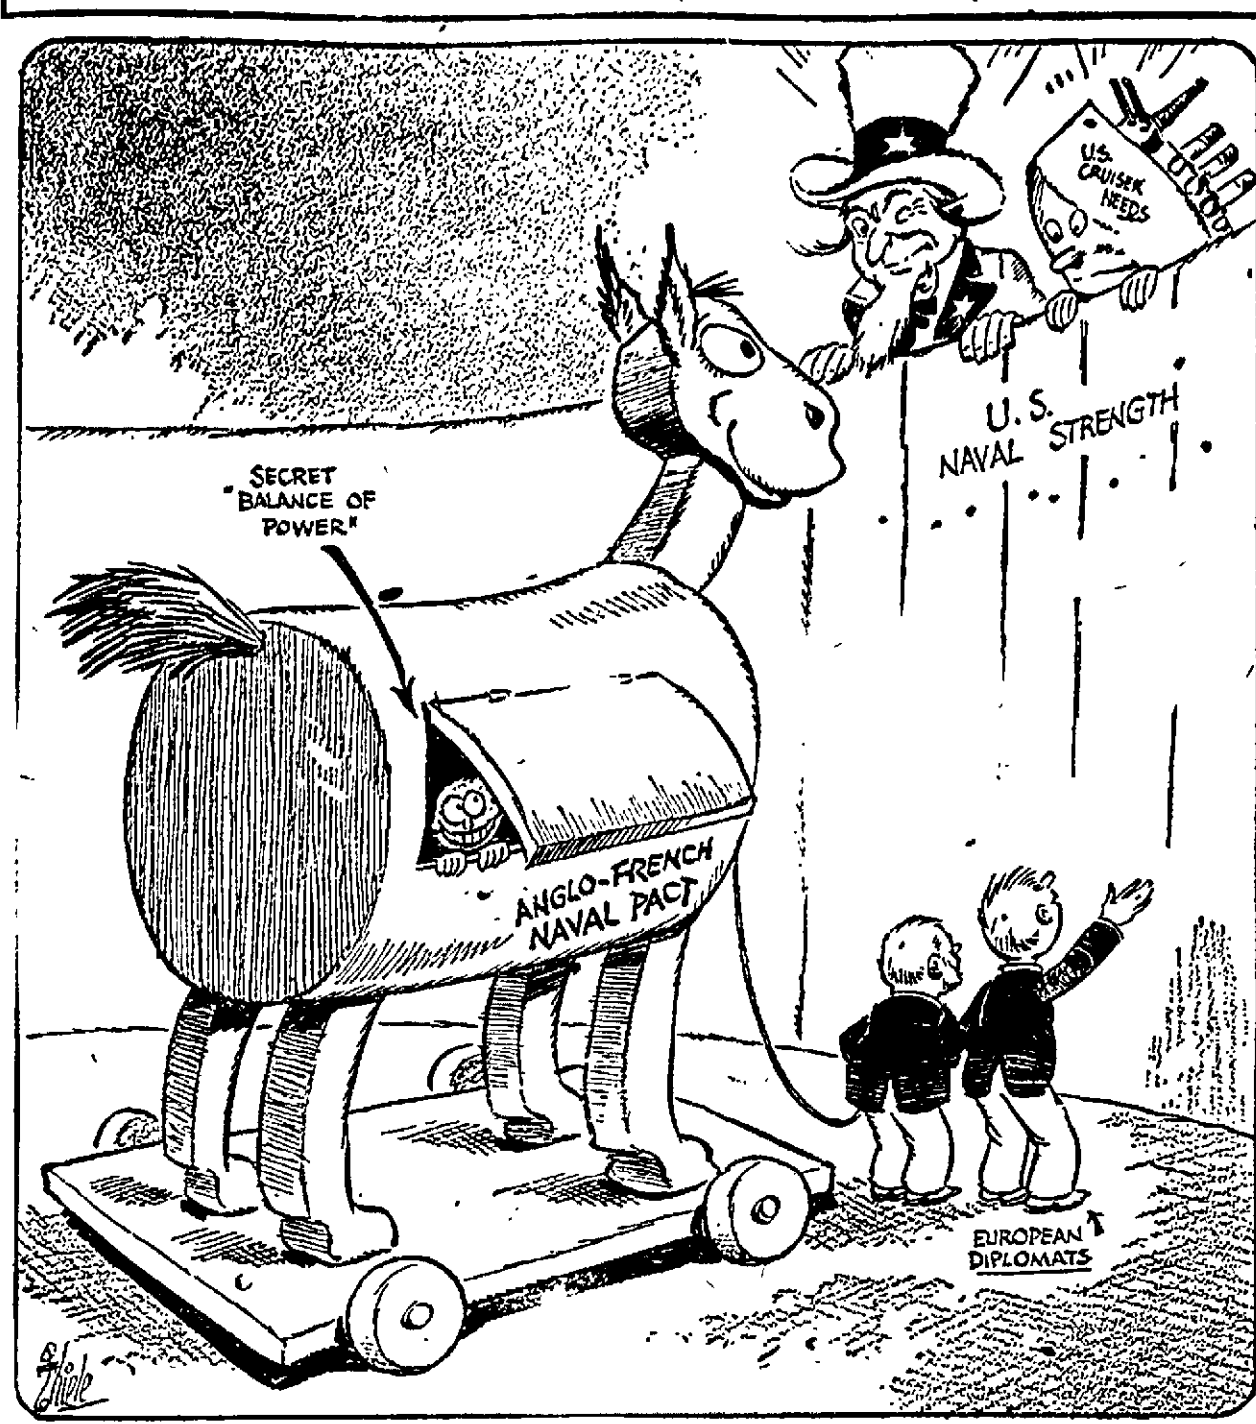

Today Freddie is as well as if he had never fallen in. He can, when he grows older, thank the remarkable energy of his mother and grandfather.

$5 FINE FOR A $1 CAR

It takes a wise man to be a judge these days. The other day a man was brought into court on New York for violating a traffic law. The judge imposed a fine of $5, at which the motorist remarked that he would prefer, instead of paying it, to surrender his car. Amazed, the judge asked him why; the man replied that he had only paid $1 for the auto, a wheezy old thing made eight years ago.

Justice is justice, and the law must be upheld; but paying a $5 fine on a $1 car is too much. Even the judge admitted it. So, after a due thought, he suspended the fine and told the motorist to depart in peace—if he could make his auto go.

BETTER LIVING FOR DIABETICS

Some wayfarers along this rollicking road to health may recall an article published here last year about a contribution to one of the medical journals by a Dr. Duffie. It was about diabetes and the instruction of the patient to control his own diet. The gleanings I noted here appealed to a good many diabetic persons; these diabetics appealed to me; and I appealed to Dr. Duffie. I had to wheedle him some, for I felt that he was the man to unscramble the mess of modern treatment of diabetes, diet, insulin and all, and make it understandable and available for common folks. Of course I knew, and Dr. Duffie knew, there were already some books written supposedly for diabetics, but I felt sure Dr. Duffie could tell it much better than any one else had been able to do, and I kept at him to put his sound, practical teachings on this subject into a little handbook for the benefit of patients and their doctors as well.

I am happy to say that Dr. Duffie has done it. The little book has been issued, and the my part in the making of it was insignificant. I am proud of "A Book for Us Diabetics," by Dr. Don H. Duffie. I could tell some very interesting things about Dr. Duffie's book. He would only let me. But here I am restricted to the barest facts. It is published by E. E. Miles, South Lancaster Mass., and costs $1.50. Dr. Duffie modestly poses as just an ordinary country doctor, but the foreword of his book is written by the distinguished head of the diabetic clinic of the University of Michigan, Dr. L. H. Newburgh who says Dr. Duffie has the ability to give all the information needed by the patient, in simple language free from difficult technicalities.

That's just what I admired so much in this country doctor, and that's why I persuaded him to get out this book.

In the first place he practically abolishes computations, yet shows the diet with whatever accuracy the conditions may require. This in itself is a stroke of genius and I believe many a diabetic patient will call Dr. Duffie blessed for doing away with higher mathematics, even percentages.

Benedict sugar tests, while not expensive, nevertheless may count up to dollars in the course of a year. Dr. Duffie tells, and the book pictures how the patient can make this classic test at one-sixteenth the usual cost. The book even gives you directions for making your own food scale, out of an old windowshade roller, a pie tin, a piece of wood ruler and some hay wire, if you want to save about $14.

Not only should diabetic patients study this little book, but I believe it will be of the greatest practical value to physicians as well.

Here is the clearest and best definition of diabetes I have ever seen—it is taken from Dr. Duffie's book.

"A diabetic is one who is starving for sugar while his blood is full of it. . . . It might be said that the diabetic blood sugar rides round and round on the delivery wagon instead of being delivered."

"A Book for Us Diabetics" shows the diabetic patient how to get an adequate ration of the "protective" foods, the essential vitamins, to make up for deprivation of milk, which contains too much sugar.

In regarding Dr. Duffie to publish this book I feel I have rendered a good health service to diabetics.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Machinist's Boils

I work in an oil station and wherever my coveralls are saturated with grease I have constant "grease boils." Is there any preventive against this? (M. K.)

Answer—The pimples, boils and festers on the hands and arms of body of machinists whose skin or clothing is much in contact with oil or cutting mixture, have been ascribed by investigators of the trouble to ordinary pus germs carried from person to person via the circulating oil or cutting mixture and in some plants this troublesome infection has been considerably reduced by strict exclusion from work of men who have such pimples, boils or festering abrasions—this for the purpose of preventing or lessening contamination of the oil. Besides this, the mineral oil probably makes the skin irritable by drying it out excessively, for it seems to dissolve out the sebum or natural oil that the normal skin soft, smooth and clean. It may be that the sebum itself has some natural germicidal action, as does normal saliva, for instance, or the normal mucus of the nasal cavity. It would be well, therefore, to wear some oilproof apron or coverall to protect your body and the car of the hands and arms requires careful washing just before and after work, preferably with a vegetable fibre cleaner such as Insto powder, rinsing and drying and then an application of a little lanolin castor oil mixture—equal parts, to restore slight oiliness to the skin. Of course any pimples, boils or festering sores must be dealt with as one must deal with ordinary boils or ordinary infected wounds, to prevent spread of the infection and the culture of more boils. If you do not understand how to do this send a stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for instructions for treating your boils.

Q. How does the number of white physicians compare with the number of negro physicians? A. T. S.

A. There is but one negro physician for each 3100 colored people, as compared with one white physician for every 550 white population.

Q. How many Americans made emergency parachute jumps from balloons during the World War? R. N.

A. One hundred and seventeen of such jumps were made in the zone of operations. Of this number 59 were made from balloons which had been attacked and set on fire by enemy aircraft and 58 from balloons which had been attacked but did not catch fire.

Editor's note—This column is open to all readers of the Post-Crescent who wish to express themselves on topics of interest. Communications are invited. Contributors must sign their names, not necessarily for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

Editor Post-Crescent—In your issue of Sept. 26th I notice a so-called answer to my letter, published Sept. 15th, signed by His Honor personally, accusing me in the first paragraph of "insincerity and dishonesty of opinion" simply because for the time being, I choose to be incognito.

In your editors note, topping every contribution to the Peoples Forum, we read the following sentence: "Contributors must sign their names. Not NECESSARILY for publication, but as an evidence of good faith." My contribution was not ANONYMOUS, every word said is true and every word said was in good faith. My name and address are on file at the publishing office and anybody, who so desires (the Mayor included), can easily get it there. The Mayor, it seems, has done the latter without delay, at least he told several people so. He knows who I am so why should he worry about it.

But now to the business at hand. 1. The Mayor's answer should be called evasion. He answers nothing, but rather evades clear-cut issues and facts. He says the people are entitled to their opinion. Right. Nobody even attempts to deny that. But it's an insult to the intelligence of our voting public to make them believe that a referendum vote on the subway now or at any time after the Railroads Commissions orders, duly issued after two consecutive public hearings, would influence any court to abate or change such orders. The Mayor excuses himself by saying the resolution was passed Sept. 5th and the writ of mandamus from the Supreme Court was served

Sept. 17th, but he neglects to say that the city was duly warned by the Attorney General's office before Sept. 5 that the writ of mandamus was forthcoming. Why then enter such senseless argument?

The Mayor allows that he and the five aldermen are not opposed to the subway, but rather to the excessive cost as estimated by him personally. That is somewhat doubtful, but even so, although repeated very often, because the official proceedings of Sept. 19 show that when the resolution, calling for a revision of the plans with the intent to cut expenses, was entered it was voted against by four of the five, one being absent. Why harp on the high cost, but oppose every move made to reduce the cost?

As usual the Mayor sets forth a long list of alibis. He accuses the "Madison Commissions" of some dire and shady activities, omitting any possible proof or facts. He blames everything either on the whole present council or some group of the council, or he blames the previous council, or the city attorney, or the city administrator. The city attorney comes in for a good slam, although he seldom takes the city attorneys advice in any important matter. He takes a good rap at the County Board and thoughtlessly at a time while a council committee is engaged in earnest and sincere negotiations with the County Board for aid on Wisconsin Ave. It's remarkable how His Honor always succeeds in throwing a monkey wrench into any machinery that's started to work for the city's benefit. We hope the County Board overlooks his sanctified expressions and listens favorably to the Council Committee, when the latter appears at the Board's session in November.

The bank tax alibi is also being worked overtime. He blames the former Council for not putting the bank-tax money into a reserve fund, but somehow he failed to keep the $50,000 appropriated subway construction in 1927, in its proper fund. But the most brazen expression in the Mayor's answer is the following: "I want to assure the Mayor that I do not enjoy it either, but as long as he is at the 'airing' job why not complete it, so the people will know what's going on."

About the middle of June, this year, while reading the official proceedings, I found among the bills paid by the city, one of $60 allowed to Mayor Rule. At that time I paid no further attention to it, but when the same bill was repeated July 1 I began to investigate and found that the Mayor had insisted to draw a so-called expense account in addition to his monthly salary. I further found that the Council had resisted such illegal payments and the city attorney had advised against it, that four members of the finance committee, Richard Steinhaver, Friebe and Vost (Diederich and Brautigan were absent) decided to sign it when it was presented to them for the first time and finally signed it on the advice of the city attorney who ruled as follows: "You can allow to the Mayor an expense account up to $60 a month but if a taxpayer kicks, then he must pay it back." Well here is one taxpayer who does kick.

If necessary I will inaugurate court proceedings to refund the money and stop further payments. While I was at the investigation I further found that the Mayor had on July 18th, without the council's consent or knowledge, sent out the three new members of the council "to inspect some pavement up north". On July 19th our local newspaper reported the group were fishing (so the reporter was informed) but nevertheless the Mayor entered expenses for the trip for all three. One of the three asked to have his stricken off the books remained and so far is not paid yet. The books at the city hall are open to the public and I invite anyone to go there and verify my statements. I know the council, with one or two exceptions, is not in favor of such things. So why harp on high expenses, why try to air the Commissions and the County Board?

"LOVE FOR TWO"

by Ruth Dewey Groves
1928 By N. E. A. Service, Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

BERTIE LOU and ROD BRYER are happily married, until LILA LORRE plots to separate them. She had once refused to marry Rod because he was poor. She meets and marries CYRUS LORRE and persuades him to aid Rod in business while she gains Bertie Lou's confidence by showing her with favors.

Gradually she arouses Rod's interest and faith in her while she plants seeds of mistrust about his wife. When Bertie Lou discovers that she sees each other secretly, she is heartbroken and indulges in the dissipation of idle wives which Lila had taught her. They drift apart but Rod will not commit himself to Lila. This infuriates her and she fakes a jewel robbery in which it appears that he is the thief; then insists on keeping it secret to save his reputation. He discovers her treachery and she says she did it to gain his love.

He repudiates her disloyalty to her husband and she reminds him that his wife is out with MARCO PALMER. He drives to the Palmer estate where he sees Marco and Bertie Lou in lounging robes and departs without learning that they were merely coming upstairs from the swimming pool.

When Bertie Lou gets home, Rod is gone, leaving no word but a check for $2,000. Not realizing that he left because of his suspicions, Bertie Lou denounces Lila for trying to take him away from her. Both women try to locate Rod without success. Bertie Lou secures a position and is puzzled when Rod makes no move to get a divorce. The suspense maddens her and to avoid the agony she continues to go about in a gay crowd with Marco. Then she thinks of a plan.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIX

"I am going to build a house," Bertie Lou said in softly, tremulously, almost under her breath. Her eyes were glowing brightly behind misty tears and a tender half-smile parted her lips. Bertie Lou never spoke of him.

"That's fine," she said. "I'd love to build a house, too."

Bertie Lou turned her head and looked at her. "Do you mind if I ask you a personal question, Miss Rogers?" she asked.

"Please call me Bertie," the other replied. "Miss Rogers sounds like the boss calling me down. What do you want to ask me?"

Bertie Lou hesitated. "I was wondering, Bertie," she began reluctantly, "if you had a sweetheart."

Bessie was quick to reply. "I haven't a steady, if that's what you mean."

"Well, then, it isn't too late for you to start right," Bertie Lou astonished her by saying. "If a man wants to marry you, Bertie, and build a house for you, let him do it—build the house, I mean, even if it's only a portable shack."

She smiled, but there was touch of earnestness in her tones that told Bertie a story lay behind her admonition.

"Well, I guess I wouldn't be saying no if I cared for the man," Bertie said uneasily, but emphatically. She couldn't understand Bertie Lou. Did she mean a girl ought to marry just to get a home?

"Of course, but some girls want marriage all their own way, Bertie. They don't think much of what the man they're going to marry would like. He may want a six-room cottage with all his heart; it may have been his dearest dream to have his own roof and a family under it, but if he's like most men he will let the girl have her way—and they may move into an apartment or even away from town and.... if things don't go right, they'll never have that house, not together."

She turned her head and blinked on the tears that threatened to spill themselves on her wan cheeks. Bertie Lou was silent because she didn't know what to say, which was the best thing she could have done.

Suddenly Bertie Lou turned back and smiled at her. "I haven't anyone to help me build my house," she said, "because I didn't know what it was like to want one with all my heart. But maybe some one else will find happiness in it. That would be nice, don't you think so, to have people being happy in your house?"

"Yes, yes," Bertie replied doubtfully. She thought it would be much nicer to be happy in it yourself. "When are you going to build it?" she asked.

"Just as soon as I can get up," Bertie Lou told her. "See here." She reached down on the foot of the bed for a folded newspaper that lay there. "Here's a whole page of a company that's building a lot of houses at Moonfields. Isn't that the loveliest name? I was out there once.... She paused and took a trembling underlip between her teeth to still it.

She had gone there with Rod, shortly after they came to New York. He'd been deeply interested in the tiny English cottages that were going up like magic—an architect's dream come true, he had succeeded in interesting a wealthy builder in pretty homes at a small cost.

were larger than the apartments she was looking at.

"But the apartment is only temporary," she had argued. "When you get where you belong in the business world, Rod dear, we will have a house, but it must be in a more exclusive neighborhood than this. And we need a real dining room."

Rod thought it would be cozy to have a table in the living room. "Right before the fireplace, and a nice cheery log fire going."

But they didn't build. And now Bertie Lou enshrined it in her memory. It was the temple of might-have-been.

"See where it says 'small payment down and balance like rent'?" she pointed out to Bertie, who leaned over the bed and studied the advertisements with her.

"Gee, what a sweet little home!" Bertie exclaimed over the picture in the middle of the page. "Is that the one you want?"

"No, but it's the same style. I'm afraid the one I'd want to have is sold, but I'm going to ask the company to build me another one just like it."

Two weeks later she made the request. Marco had come for her and driven her out to Moonfields. "But what on earth you want out here in the prairie is a mystery to me," he grumbled. Bertie Lou did not tell him until they were in the company's office. Then he heard it indirectly.

He stared at her in amazement as she explained what she wanted. Yes, the house could be duplicated. Exactly? Exactly! But several blocks away from the original, of course. Moonfields had grown rapidly.

"How long will it take you to build it? And how much is your down payment?" Bertie Lou sounded very businesslike, but inwardly she was so excited she could hardly keep from showing it in her manner.

What if the down payment was more than the money she had? The question of future payments she had solved by planning to rent the property. Her joy in it did not extend beyond the thought of ownership—to live in it would be to turn it into a pillory, where escape from her memories would be impossible.

Marco stood by, completely dismayed, while she talked over details and terms and finally signed her name on several papers, one of which was a check for $1,500.

The initial payment required by the company was less, but Bertie Lou wanted to put all of Rod's $2,000 into the house. Five hundred of it she figured she might need for extra expenses, and the things a new house always required. She had not forgotten her father's shop talk, and as a carpenter's daughter she knew something of building. Her house was going to be built right.

"See here," Marco burst out when they were back in his roadster. "What do you think you want with a house like that?"

"It's... an obligation," Bertie Lou told him. "Everyone who builds a house like that, as you call it, adds something to the sum total of happiness, Marco. You're too young to know that you've got to make others happy to be happy yourself."

"With all due veneration for your gray hairs," Marco returned sarcastically, "there's a hole in your argument through which you're going to plop right into my hat."

Bertie Lou merely looked at him. "If it's so necessary to make others happy how about giving me a little consideration?" he demanded. "Why build a house for strangers to build and coo in?"

"You promised you wouldn't begin that again, Marco. Next time I'll come on the train."

"But, Bertie Lou, it's absurd. It's unheard of... it's monstrous, the way you treat me. Anyone would think I was nobody. Why, I've reformed for you. Half the night clubs in New York have closed and the rest are just barely keeping the wolf from the door."

"It won't hurt you," Bertie Lou returned dryly. "Isn't there anything I can do to make you even think about marrying me?" Marco pleaded.

"Maybe some day I will if you keep on nagging me," she told him. "It will be your own fault if I do, Marco. You wouldn't get much. I'm just a hollow shell. I haven't any heart at all."

"I suppose I haven't any right to expect Lady Luck to shoot the whole works on me," Marco mourned in a philosophic tone. "But I'd rather have been born poor with a chance that you'd love me as my share of good fortune. Believe it or not."

"If you'd ever been poor I might believe it, Marco," Bertie Lou said. "But I can't love you, so you might as well enjoy the blessings you have. Besides, my love never blessed anybody."

"Give it a chance, and see," Marco urged. "You know what the mother said to her reluctant daughter: 'Love will come afterward.'"

Bertie Lou did not reply. She was thinking that sometimes love

REPORT ON ONEIDA HEALTH CONDITIONS

Results of the recent survey of health conditions on Oneida Indian reservation were presented at a meeting of the county health committee last Friday by Miss Maile Klein, county nurse. The committee discussed plans for treating and caring for the various diseases found in the survey, but no definite action was taken pending word from the state board of health, to which the report has been presented.

Dr. V. A. Gubay, deputy state health officer in charge of the third sanitary district of which Outagamie county is a part, also attended the meeting Friday. Dr. Gubay was in charge of the work at Oneida. He was assisted by Miss Klein, Miss Catherine Fox of the River View sanatorium and Miss M. Rosenblum of the Hickory Grove sanatorium. Five cases of tuberculosis were found, in addition to many cases of bad teeth, tonsillitis and gonorrhea.

TWO APPLETON BOYS PLACED ON PAROLE

Two Appleton boys, 17 and 18 years old, were placed on parole by Judge Fred V. Heinemann in juvenile court Saturday. They had been arrested and charged with a series of car thefts during the past summer and were found guilty in juvenile court a week ago. It was charged the boys took the cars from the parking lot on Lincoln school grounds, used them to ride in for a night and then abandoned them on a side street. Three other boys, ranging in age from 15 to 17 years, were ordered by the judge to report to him once a week. They had been arrested on similar charges.

PROF. GRAFF ATTENDS MADISON CONFERENCE

Prof. Marshall C. Graff, representative of the University of Wisconsin in this district, was at Madison last week to confer with school authorities on the development of class work in this district. A new field organizer will be assigned to the local district sometime this week, according to Mr. Graff.

Named for the Maine woods way of baking beans in an oven in the ground called the "bean hole"

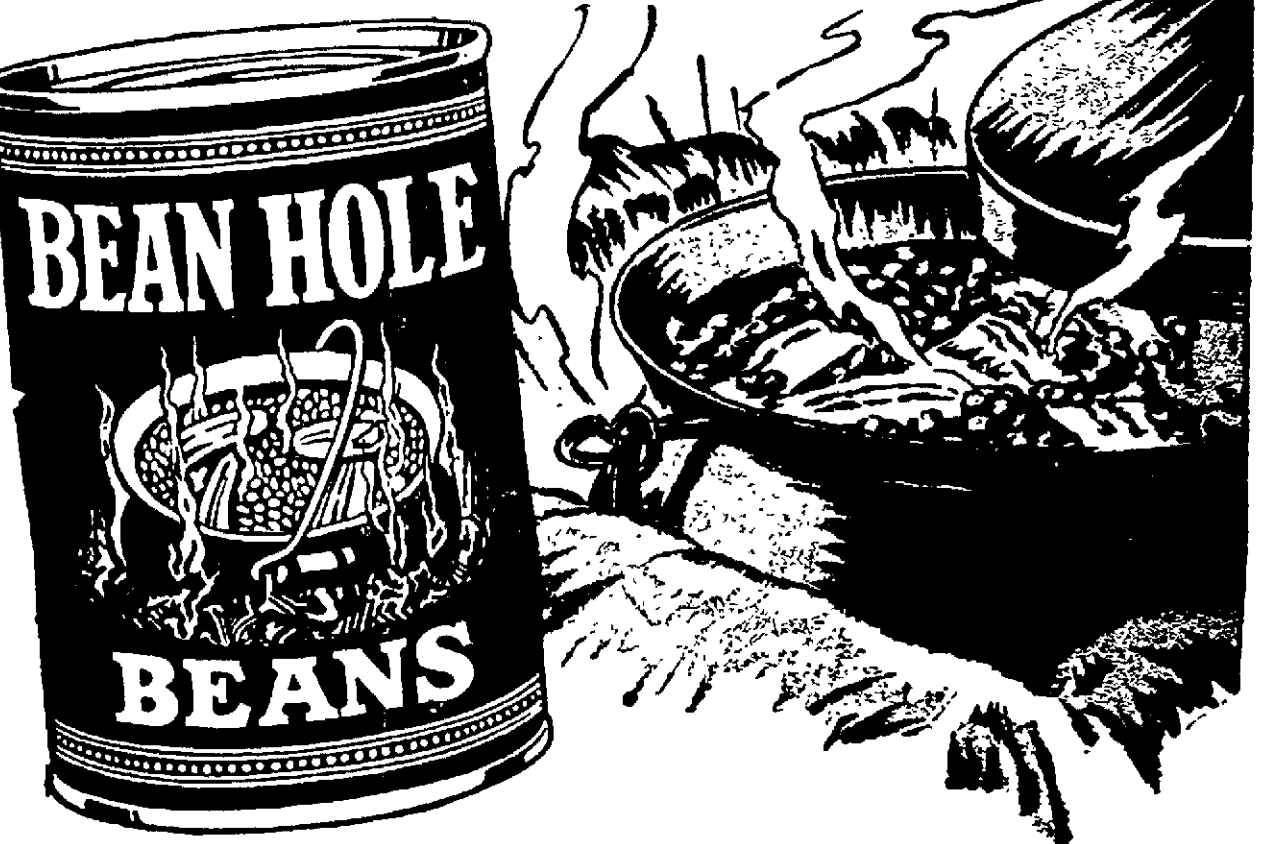

Bean Hole Beans! The very name sounds good, doesn't it? And the beans—you'll say you've never tasted such baked-bean flavor!

They are a reproduction of the beans baked in the lumber camps of the Maine woods. In them you get the same wonderful "baked-out-of-doors" flavor—with the fragrance of pine woods and wood smoke seasoning!

The very same ingredients are used—lots of prime sugar-cured pork, brown sugar and molasses. Mellow, tender as butter!

You have a new pleasure in store if you haven't tried Bean Hole Beans yet. Don't put it off—get a can or two today and have them for supper.

Your grocer has two sizes, medium and large.

Now! LATH

in new form

from tough cane fibre . . . that gives permanent beauty to plastered walls . . .

that shuts out freezing cold!

A NEW discovery! Celotex Lath, a plaster base that keeps your home cool and enjoyable in summer; that protects you from cold and dampness during winter.

Moreover, Celotex Lath cuts down your winter fuel bill by keeping heat where you want it—inside walls and ceilings.

Celotex Lath is made from the long tough fibres of cane which contain millions of tiny sealed air cells—just what is needed for efficient insulation.

This new lath is 18 inches wide and 48 inches long. Its beveled edges insure extra plaster at the joints, a protection against cracking; its ship-lap joints eliminate open spaces, the cause of disfiguring lath marks.

Celotex already is well known due to the widespread use of Celotex Standard Building Board for sheathing; for lining basements, garages, attics, roofs and for many other purposes.

Think what Celotex offers you in building economy, fuel saving, quieter rooms, a more healthful home and greater living comfort throughout the year!

A PAGE OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

BEAUTY HINTS

WHAT WILL BE THE TOKENS OF PRESENT DAYS?

Genevieve Parkhurst wrote a magazine article about Miss Emily Howland, Quaker woman of over 100 living near Sherwood, who seems to be one of those few old people who can supply an interpretation to that past world of women which we can have little longer except through history.

The author tells of the treasures in her calash bowl — an old yellow glove, a sampler, a hair brooch, a reticule. One wonders just what today's woman might have to show the people who call to see her 80 years from now and want tokens of that world which is ours today?

What could we show? Movie and theater stubs, auto licenses, a radio battery, an orthophonic record, silk hose, beauty clay. Our world may seem as strange to them then as Miss Howland's is to us now. But we have nothing so romantic and colorful to hand on as white mitts and reticules and samplers.

It was not quite nine o'clock that morning when Sandy's disgraceful flivver shivered to a stop before the Tarvers' new house.

"Keep your chin up, kid," Sandy sang out above the roar of the motor.

"Good morning, Miss Tarver," a stranger greeted Tony in a beautifully modulated "Boston" voice. "I'm Miss Grosvenor. You dear mother has calistayed my aid in the coming festivities. May I congratulate you, my dear?"

"Sorry," Tony retorted, her bare head flung back defiantly. "There's been a little mistake. I'm not engaged."

The elderly spinster gasped. "Please forgive me for speaking curtly," Tony begged. "I know it's not your fault. I wonder—listen, Miss Grosvenor, I'm in this day of a jam. Your mother is going to have a bad time. You see, Miss Grosvenor, Dick Talbot and I are agreed on not wanting to get married just now. Some sort of denial has simply got to be sent to the papers, and those awful tea invitations canceled right away—today. Won't you please help me—Mother? Convince her that this isn't the first time in the history of the world that a girl has changed her mind? Please, please, very wide and childlike and mistled over with tears, did the work. Miss Grosvenor laid a thin, blue-veined old hand on Tony's shoulder and promised her aid.

"I admire your courage, child," the elderly social secretary was saying, when a shrill "Too-hoo Tony!" interrupted.

"My chum's calling me," Tony explained, as she saw Crystal flying across the street. "You try to break the news to Mother and I'll be in when I've seen what Crystal wants. And thanks with all my heart, Miss Grosvenor. You're a peach of a sport."

It is doubtful if Miss Emmaline Grosvenor had ever been called a "peach of a sport" before in her life. Tony, unconscious that she had made a life-long friend, ran down the walk to join Crystal.

"Oh, Tony," she gasped. "The very weirdest thing has happened. If I didn't know his voice, I'd think it was one of the boys just kidding me, but—" Crystal paused for breath. "Tony, honestly I didn't do a thing to make this happen, but—"

"For heaven's sake, spill it!" Tony urged furiously. "Did Dick Talbot call you up and date you?"

"Oh," Crystal cried, closing her big hazel eyes and swaying slightly. "This is simply too uncanny. Tony, he did! I could have dropped dead I was so surprised. Faith had just finished reading your mother's formal invitation to the announcement tea and—"

"I broke my engagement—such as it was—last night, Crystal," Tony said evenly.

So that was the way Dick was going to play the game! He was going to try to make her jealous, was he, going to "date" the girl across the street—Tony's best friend—so that he could keep an eye on her, and keep her eyes on him! The sulky-mouthed, spoiled, handsome brat! Suddenly Tony felt a little better.

"You're sure you don't mind?" Crystal cried, shameless in her joy. "Oh, Tony, I'm quite mad about him—love at first sight! I've been so miserable. But now it's going to be all right. There comes my street car! Got to run. I adore you, Tony, and I'm so happy..."

Tony stared after Crystal incredulously, then shrugged and marched into the house to face the music.

NEXT: Tony conquers Peg.

THREE GIRLS MAKE LARGE RANCH PAY

Turlock, Cal.—(AP)—Without masculine aid, the three Austin sisters, Violet, Lily and May, all of whom are under 18, have plowed, cultivated, planted and harvested the crop on a 100-acre track which they are raising for near here. Their harvest has included 200 tons of melons, 150 tons of grapes and lesser quantities of fruits and vegetables.

Besides the cultivating and irrigating the three sisters have milked 40 cows twice a day, cared for 10 head of horses, pitched hay and raised 10 acres of alfalfa, raised chickens and turkeys and done such chores as repairing windmill and fences.

The three farmerettes took complete charge of the ranch when their father was incapacitated for work because of an injury.

Women Still Cling To Ensemble Theme For Boudoir And Ballroom

MISS MARJORIE OELRICHS

MRS. JEROME NAPOLEON BONAPARTE

MISS BERNICE CHRYSLER

BY BETSY SCHUYLER

NEW YORK—The way smart women cling to the ensemble theme for everything from the boudoir to the ballroom is just another conclusive proof that they know what they wanted the minute they saw it.

Winter garb insists on the ensemble theme, even if its just a frock and a winter coat that form a companionate union. Four out of five chic Americans stepping off boats returning from Europe sponsor the ensemble. Tweeds, jerseys, kashas, velveteens, velvets, broadcloths—all are to be seen, mostly in blues or autumn tints.

Beige and brown, with a luxurious wealth of fine detail, was the smart afternoon ensemble. Bernice Chrysler wore to Pierre's. The very fine kasha coat had pleated inserts of the matching flat crepe for cuffs and novelty pockets. It had a collarless neckline.

ROOFS STILL CROWDED

The dress had circular fullness from the pointed skirt yoke and a very rich, lovely pointed lace yoke. Her accessories were brown.

Even though there's a nip in the air, the St. Regis roof still houses a gay crowd for late-hour dancing. I noticed Lady White Tood wearing one of the very long spangled chiffon coats over a chiffon gown, a very new version of the summer's dinner jacket.

Several smart women favored white for evening, including Mrs. Albert E. Austin, who wore soft, shimmering satin. Mrs. Curtis Hahn, lace, and Mrs. Percival Everett, a gown that used bands of shimmering diamante to mark its clever cut.

The other day I passed Mrs. Ben Thaw as she turned into the Vanderbilt. She looked handsome and most attractive in a grey ensemble that used pointed fox to advantage.

The four-strand pearl necklace made its appearance on the graceful neck of Mrs. Walter Hanley of Greenwich. They were graduated in size and in color, with a very pale grey next the throat, shading into darker ones on the outside strand.

Lunching with Mrs. Frank Adair, Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte wore a choker of large pearls and a double strand long necklace, with a stunning new velvet ensemble. It has varied polka dots of tan, beige and white dancing. Her fox was the longest one yet seen in New York in this season of sumptuous furs. Little ruffles posed diagonally across the bottom of sleeves gave a very effective graceful effect on a dark, rich-crepe frock. Barbara Hutten wore one day shopping with little Elaine Richardson. Elaine's feet were smartly shod in the new Prince of Wales oxfords the many chic folks elect to wear now.

Colorful coats of all-over embroidery in gay shades worked by hand on fine tan linen are the prizes some women brought back from Vienna or Paris this summer. Mrs. George Grant Mason's had red, orange tans and a luscious ruddy brown. It is chic to match the right color up with a stitched felt cheapeau, apparently.

Bright blues are running rampant in smart wardrobes right now. About the prettiest blue ensemble I've seen this autumn is one Marjorie Kimball has—a jersey, circular skirt and cardigan coat and a fine velvet overblouse in a printed pattern of at least five blues.

SOME SMARTLY SUITED

Some women look their very best in suits, know it, and consequently delight the eyes of those who behold them. Witness Dorothy Lodyard, strolling down Park avenue with her huge police dog, herself in a seal brown suit, smart tailored velvet hat and fur thrown over one arm.

Another such smart suit wearer is Marjorie Oelrichs, versatile young social regitiste, who has a new grey suit with very fine lines of darker grey checking it. The skirt is cut on the diagonal and pleated and the jacket's plain. She looks delightful feminine with a ruffled pleat around her collar, orchids perched on her shoulder and a hat has some soft flowers nestled against the Spanish bandeau on one side.

STUDIES STATUS OF EAST WOMEN

Constantinople.—(AP)—A study of the changing status of women of the east is to be made by Miss Ruth Woodsmall of Colorado Springs and Indianapolis, who has been granted a year's leave of absence from her post here as executive secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Her investigations will carry her through the near and middle east up to northern India, her chief aim being to report on the direction which the emancipation of oriental women is taking, with emphasis on the sociological effect of the rapid changes which are affecting the women of Syria, Arabia, Persia, Afghanistan, India and Turkey.

Bridal Secretary Plans Trousseau For Clients

New York's first "bridal secretary," Miss Marie Courdet Brenning, insert, one of Miss Brenning's clients, Governor Smith's daughter, Katherine, in her bridal gown that had seven yards of rose point lace. Gown from B. Altman and Co.

BY JULIA BLANSHARD

NEW YORK—Cupid himself is scarcely busier getting ready for autumn weddings than Marie Courdet Brenning.

For Miss Brenning is "bridal secretary" in one of Fifth Avenue's foremost stores, the first position of its kind ever created.

In her office, which is fitted up like a dainty ivory, pale green-blue and yellow boudoir with chaise-longues, soft lights, dressing table and comfy chairs with quaint little quilted pillows, she advises prospective brides about their trousseau.

AN INTERESTING JOB

"Since I started last spring I have had brides from 16 to 60, from Portland, Maine, to Japan, and brides of seven nationalities, including a beauty from Guatemala," Miss Brenning recounted, obviously as interested in each client as if she had been a personal acquaintance.

"Some simply want advice on whether to wear lace, satin or tulle or the kind of veil to select. Others want me to budget their entire trousseau for them, from the kind and amount of house linen to the color scheme of the wedding."

"But," she added, "the majority of brides have thought enough about their weddings to know pretty much what they want. It is details they discuss."

HELPED HER FRIENDS

Becoming a "bridal secretary" was chance, according to Miss Brenning. Born into New York's exclusive circles and educated here and abroad, Miss Brenning is one more Social Register who preferred a career to just a round of social life. She trained to be an interior decorator and then found herself much more interested in clothes and settings for them than in inlaid rooms. Helping some friends plan their weddings last year, the idea of capitalizing on their talent came to her.

It isn't only the very expensive weddings that she is interested in, however. The most fun she has had was an entire wedding outfit she planned for a little girl from out west who had saved $75 for it. The next day, Miss Brenning helped a New Yorker select an $11,000 trousseau.

Last spring Setsuko Matsudaria, who will become the bride of Prince Chichibu of Japan this fall, consulted Miss Brenning in choosing her trousseau. Of course she will wear the traditional kimono for the ceremony. But Miss Brenning helped her choose her other costumes.

She helped Governor Smith's daughter, Katherine, choose her wedding raiment, the bridal gown itself having seven yards of gorgeous old rose point lace imported from Belgium.

glum. Many Social Registerites ask her advice, and she completely planned the brilliant wedding of her sister, Antoinette, who married Peter R. Lawson.

WEDDINGS ARE DIFFERENT

"There are no rules for styles, colors or anything else about wedding that can be laid down absolutely," Miss Brenning insisted. "A wedding is the most personal and individual thing in the world and each one should be different."

"A woman of 60 came to me one day. Ordinarily I should suggest beige, lovely soft grey or some other beautiful tone for her outfit. But she confided that all her life she had thought of herself as a 'white bride.' So she went to the altar in a gorgeous white satin gown, veil and everything."

Certain preferences this autumn were cited by Miss Brenning:

"The long-sleeved wedding gown is smartest right now. For most details, the thing that becomes a bride is smartest. White velvet is having a vogue for winter wedding gowns, though Duchess satin is always correct and lovely. They are using everything they want now—lace, chiffon or tulle. The preferred line is the tight bodice, with peacock full skirt with train. A woman's veil should be designed on her head."

ONE IN CONTRASTING DRESS

"Off-white is excellent now in wedding raiment. A wedding I planned had bisque for the attendants with American beauty velvet roses. The maid of honor wore American beauty. Salmon and tea-rose pinks, with a dash of blue makes a beautiful wedding party. The vogue of having one attendant in a contrasting color gives just the right touch.

"But I feel that every wedding should be just what the bride wants. For, after all, it's her party and since most girls, no matter how modern, think often about their weddings, they usually have their own ideas. I think these should be followed."

PIERCE SUCCEEDED FILLMORE; SLAVERY ISSUE BURIED SCOTT

Election of 1852 Was Last in Which Whig Party Participated

(Editors Note: How Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire won the presidency in 1852 when the slavery issue dominated, is told in this chapter of "The Presidential Parade," Rodney Dutcher's review of 140 years of presidential campaigning.)

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
(Copyright, 1928, by Post Pub. Co.)
Washington—The 1852 election was the last of the Whigs. It will be noted that none of the eight presidents who followed Andrew Jackson in the White House was able to succeed himself and only Van Buren was strong enough to obtain his party's renomination.

Two of them, of course, died in office, but the period offers a marked contrast with the present day, when a president is supposed to be good for at least two terms.

Millard Fillmore made a strong fight to break the slavery jinx in the Whig convention of 1852, but lost to Gen. Winfield Scott, the Mexican war hero, known as "Old Chapultepec" and "Old Fuss and Feathers."

President Taylor, whom Fillmore succeeded, had proved a brave man, though not especially competent. The slavery issue predominated in his administration. As a Virginian and a slaveholder, he had been nominated by the controlling faction of southern Whigs who expected him to stand by slavery as a political issue. He didn't. When Calhoun asked him to keep the disunion toft out of his first address, Taylor added an emphatic paragraph denouncing disunionists.

BEFRIENDS SPOILS SYSTEM
But Taylor applied the spoils system ruthlessly. Officers of Rough and Ready campaign clubs and everybody's relatives, including those of Webster, Clay and Calhoun, were given federal jobs. Clay was back in Washington at the age of 73, still with an eye for women, a taste for cards and a healthy thirst, if not still hoping for the presidency.

Clay, Calhoun and Webster, who had all been secretaries of state and one a vice president, were making their last public bow together. Calhoun died before the session's end, after being brought to the chamber in blankets to hear another read his last defiant speech. Jefferson Davis succeeded him as the secessionist leader. Clay worked seven months on his famous slavery compromise of 1850, his last great effort to save the Union, and Webster supported him in his seventh of March speech, which lost him the north and his last chance for nomination.

Senator William H. Seward of New York had "become" administration leader, sharing Taylor's anti-compromise sympathies. Seward and Vice President Fillmore fought for the New York patronage and Seward got it, whereafter he and most of the cabinet snubbed Fillmore.

DEATH OF TAYLOR
One day, during the heat of the compromise debate, Taylor insisted on drinking several pints of milk on top of great gobs of cherries on a very hot day, and died. Fillmore became president and the cabinet which had sneered at him resigned in a hurry. Fillmore adopted the compromise cause and made Webster secretary of state. The compromise became law.

The Democrats became united on the compromise, but the southern and northern Whigs were badly split.

The foregoing lengthy sketch of events was made necessary by their effect on the nominations and the election. Anti-compromise sentiment in the north finally barred Fillmore from nomination along with Webster and really licked the Whigs before they were started. Then only possible hope was to nominate a non-committal candidate whose views were unknown—which they did.

The Democratic convention met first, in Baltimore. The candidates were Gen. Lewis Cass of Michigan, defeated in the 1844 election; James Buchanan of Pennsylvania; William L. Marcy of New York and Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois, who had been running around the country promising jobs to all who would support him.

First ballot stood: Cass 116, Buchanan 92, Marcy 27, Douglas 20, Joseph Lane 13 and Sam Houston 8. On the 25th, Cass had but 27, Buchanan 92 and Douglas 91, but Cass got back remarkably to 131 on the 25th. On that same ballot Virginia brought out Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire, but he had only risen to 55 on the 48th. On the 49th he was almost unanimously nominated.

ALL WELL PLANNED
The Pierce nomination had been carefully planned long before the convention under leadership of his college mate and close friend, Senator Brabury of Maine, with the help of Caleb Cushing and Ben Butler. Pierce was a Mexican War vet who had resigned from the Senate and left Washington because of his weakness for liquor. His wife faintly when she heard what was to her the sad news of his nomination and Pierce himself didn't want it.

Pierce won because his record in Congress was satisfactory to the south. The convention adjourned and turned to watch the Whigs after promulgating a platform denouncing abolitionists and nominating William R. King of Alabama for vice president. Harmony resigned supreme as Van Buren left the Free Soilers and returned to Tammany Hall, his old love, and Pierce began a front porch campaign.

AT THE WHIG CONVENTION
The Whig convention found southern delegates supporting President Fillmore and northern General Scott. Webster's southern friends believed he could inherit most of Fillmore's strength after Fillmore and Pierce had worn each other out. In return, Webster had promised to support the pro-slavery platform adopted by southern delegates in an early caucus. But northern Whigs like Greeley, Seward and Weed were determined to beat both Webster and Fillmore, although Clay had urged the latter's nomination.

Webster had been promised the nomination if he could get 41 northern delegates—and he couldn't, for Maine because his Ashburton treaty years before had favored Britain or Maine. Thus the deal that won out was that by which the south agreed to take Scott, the north's candidate, if the north would take the south's pro-slavery platform.

Fillmore was purely a southern candidate—he didn't even have his home state's delegation from New York. On the first ballot he had 133 to Scott's 131 and Webster's 28. This setup continued virtually the same until the 50th ballot, when Scott began to draw ahead and won on the 53d with 153. The platform endorsed the compromise and the fugitive slave law.

While Pierce stayed at home, "Old Fuss and Feathers" Scott insisted on making some silly campaign speeches which lost him votes. Of Scott, Buchanan said: "He was vain beyond any man I ever knew, obstinate, self-willed and unyielding."

BURIED BY THE ISSUE
Even Scott's fine military record availed him nothing against the issue that buried him. The Whig platform enraged many party members in the north and the southern slaveholders knew better than to pass up the Democrats of whom they were sure for the badly divided Whigs. In desperation, northern Whigs adopted the slogan: "Support the candidate and split on the platform!"

The nation's crushing answer to them was as follows:

	Popular	Electoral
Pierce	1,601,000	254
Scott	1,336,000	42
Hale	156,000	None
(Free Soil)

By narrow margins, the Whigs had carried only Massachusetts, Kentucky, Tennessee and Vermont. Their goose was cooked.

TOMORROW: The Republican party becomes a powerful national force.

STAGE And SCREEN

LON CHANEY RECEIVES MAIL FROM H. H. DREDS

Convicts are among Lon Chaney's best critics. Among the most interesting of his fan mail are letters from various prisons throughout the United States, where convicts are shown pictures in recreation periods, and Chaney says that some of the most valuable hints as to characterizations come from these men behind bars.

"There seems," he says, "to be one outstanding fact that they always bring out, which is that, no matter how bad a man is, he always has some redeeming human quality. I have never had a letter from a convict who didn't say he was taking his medicine, and never saw a letter in which one said he was wrong. They have little self pity, but do appreciate a human character."

Chaney plays the opposite in a way, as he appears as a police detective in his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle, "While the City Sleeps," now playing at Fischers Appleton Theatre. The new picture is a vivid underworld drama in which Chaney as a plainclothesman is pitted against the hordes of a gangster band. Thrilling machine gun battles between police and gangsters and other vivid detail marks the mystery romance.

Incidentally the notable cast in the picture is almost entirely composed of former stage celebrities. Anita Page, who plays the heroine, is the only member of the cast not from before the footlights. Mae Busch, Richard Carle, the famous star of "Mary's Lamb," and "The Spring Chicken," Lydia Yeamans Titus, beloved character actress and former famous star, Clinton Lyle of "Madame Sherry" fame, Carroll Nye, Polly Moran, late of vaudeville, Wheeler Okunian, noted stage actor, and others are in the big cast.

COLMAN-BANKY MOST FAMOUS SCREEN PAIR

To the list of stage and screen lovers who have habitually appeared opposite each other, the names of Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky were added in 1925. Since then "Banky-Colman" has blinked in white lights from New York to sleepy hollows. Audiences have taken it for granted that Mr. Colman and Miss Banky would continue to co-star until Ruby Peggy should grow up and Hollywood should become a deserted village. But Samuel Goldwyn has other plans for them.

Having shown love in the West, in a mythical circus, in medieval times and modern, having played together in four pictures, they are to star separately after their fifth, "Two Lovers," which is now showing at the Elite Theatre. In this adaptation of Baroness Orczy's novel, they interpret the sixteenth century love of Flemish burgher for Spanish grandee's daughter.

When the last scene was taken against Carl Borg's conception of the turreted Kasteel in Ghent and Vilma had doffed her plumes and laid aside her hooped skirts, the partnership of Banky and Colman became a matter of screen history.

Sherdel Picked To Halt Yankees In Fourth Game

Waite Hoyt Again Yank Choice To Humble Cards

Red Birds in Desperate Drive to Keep Hugmen from Running Away

St. Louis—(AP)—With the original world series cast again on the bill, the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday welcomed an opportunity to resume their performance postponed a day when rain prevented the fourth act Tuesday.

For the game that may prove the most important of the series, Managers Huggins and McKechnie selected the same athletes who started the series in New York last Thursday.

With three legs on the world championship cup, the New Yorkers were chagrined at the postponement of the fourth game.

A huge tarpaulin covering every inch of the infield remained down throughout the night and weather bureau officials could find no hint of rain in the vicinity of Sportsman's park. The forecast was for good baseball weather, warm and not too much wind.

The Cardinals welcomed Tuesday's respite. After losing three games in a row the National league championship may change must be for the better, so they were well content to stand by and hope their rivals might lose some of their steam while waiting for the game the world champions have declared will be the last.

The day of enforced idleness made Manager McKechnie all the more determined to send Bill Sherdel in to pitch.

Waite Hoyt will have a unanimous chance to shade Bill again Tuesday for he has been made the unanimous choice to do the pitching for the Yanks.

Where Manager Huggins was willing to name the Brooklyn pitcher as one of two possible underdogs after Sunday's game he came out flatfooted for his ace Tuesday.

Hoyt took opportunity to jump in to the game for there are places in the baseball record book reserved for him in the event of a victory. Among others there would be winning six world series and capturing two of a series of four, for if Hoyt is returned winner Tuesday there will not be any more this year.

Sherdel cannot complete a record merely by winning but he can establish himself as a hero, at least temporarily, with a victory. If he can turn the Yankees back with his southpaw shoots, the series will be kept alive and once in the won column the Cardinals figure they can add other victories.

Tuesday's game brought the right and left hand shift at the plate into action in both games. George Harper who bats from the left side got the call for outfield duty from St. Louis.

Ben Paschal and Joe Dugan, orthodox right hand batsmen, returned to the Yankees array of talent.

St. Louis was entitled to three world series games if its representatives could enforce the city's right, so a victory for the Cardinals Tuesday automatically would assure the Missouri metropolis another baseball battle Wednesday. If after that the Yankees still should find themselves short of four games won the battlefield would shift back to New York, for a contest Friday.

If the National leaguers can make such a record, a drab series will be converted into one brilliant with suspense. Some of the fans and file of the fans were frankly pessimistic, many shook their heads in gloom at the plight of their favorites and a store window bore an inscription, "Bye bye red birds," a play on a song sung with great success in St. Louis in the 1926 series.

START SALE OF TICKETS FOR M. U. HOME GAMES

Milwaukee—Stanley Lowe, director of ticket sales in the Marquette university department of athletics, now has reserved seats on sale for all of Marquette's 1928 home football games. Remaining home battles are Oct. 12, Drake, 20; Oklahoma A. & M., Nov. 10; Kansas (homecoming); Nov. 17; Creighton; Nov. 23 (Thanksgiving); Iowa State; Marquette plays Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass., Oct. 27, and Grinnell, Ia., Nov. 3.

FOUGHT HIM BEFORE

Under the heading of "You Never Can Tell" another entry might be made of the case of young Tony Canzoneri, who until recently was the world's featherweight champion.

He isn't the champion now because he was beaten by the Frenchman, Andre Routis, in a battle for the title in New York.

Canzoneri was so weakened by making the weight that he faded after the eighth round when the plodding Frenchman came on to win.

The Italian youngster knew he couldn't make the weight much longer and he was getting ready to get out of the class.

He had two big money bouts in the making against Harry Eblman and Benny Bass and he took the Routis fight to get himself in fighting shape for the other two.

Joe Jacobs said he didn't want to be bothered with him even if Routis insisted that he might be convinced into the featherweight championship.

Maybe Jacobs didn't pay $50,000 for Delaney but what he got in Delaney was no bargain at any price.

But what was thrown to him in Routis will bring Joe enough to get him an overcoat for the winter and the breezes are cold on the street corners where Joe had to do his work last winter.

Routis will make plenty of dough out of his title because Joe will be in there protecting the first good meal ticket he has had in years.

GIVE FRISCH ASSIST ON PART IN WIERD PLAY IN THIRD GAME

St. Louis—(AP)—An assist has been credited to Frank Frisch for his part in the weird play which helped the Yankees sew up the third world series game with three unearned runs in the sixth inning, the board of officials scorers announced Monday.

With Ruth on second, Gehrig on first and one out, Mousell rolled to High, who tossed to Frisch, forcing Gehrig. The Fordham flash then made a poor throw to Bottomley in a vain attempt to double Mousell.

Ruth, noticing the wide toss, dashed for the plate, but would have been out had Wilson held Bottomley's relay.

The Cardinal first baseman, of course, received an assist for his part in the play, but none was credited immediately to Frisch. The St. Louis second baseman was exempt from an error on his poor toss unless either Mousell or Ruth caught an extra base thereon, and since he would have had an assist if Wilson had completed the double play, the scorers decided to credit him on the play as made.

INDIANA CAUSING WORRY IN BIG TEN

Will Play First Conference Game Saturday at Ann Arbor

Chicago—(AP)—Pat Page and the towering Crimson clad Indiana eleven have hit whipped together on the banks of the Wabash are causing nothing but worry among their ambitions big ten football rivals this year.

Ever since the ingenious Page played football, baseball and basketball for the university of Chicago years ago, he has been busy blasting other teams' championship hopes.

At Butler, he made a great record and last year his Indiana team ruined Minnesota's title hopes by holding the Gophers to a 14-14 tie.

But this season, page has what is heralded as one of the most powerful eleven in Indiana's history.

And while not regarded as a big ten title contender, its rivals, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio State, Minnesota, Northwestern and Purdue, respect and fear it. Coach Zuppke of Illinois is especially apprehensive as his team meets the Hoosiers in its first conference clash, Oct. 20.

Page's hopefuls, strong in the line and fleet in the backfield, showed its fighting instinct Saturday when it came from behind to defeat the Oklahoma Sooners, 10 to 7. Indiana has some capable kickers, especially Hughes who kicked a field goal from his 35 yard line against Oklahoma.

Michigan is Indiana's first conference opponent. They meet at Ann Arbor Saturday.

Big Ten teams went through only light drills Monday but scrimmages was on Tuesday program.

At Michigan and Illinois, several shifts have been made in the varsity lineup. Coach Tad Wieman of Michigan took four players from the second team and injected them into the varsity in an attempt to bolster his machine, while Coach Zuppke, disappointed with the ease by which Bradley Tech scored its one touchdown against Illinois, swapped his players freely.

Because of the Badger's victory over Notre Dame, Wisconsin is filled with confidence. They have a doubleheader with Cornell college of Iowa and North Dakota state Saturday, but Coach Thistlethwaite is pointing to the Purdue game, October 20.

NO FOOTBALL FOR VEACH

Bobby Veach, veteran baseball star now in the American Association, has refused to allow his son, Clifford, to go out for football at Detroit high school.

Joe Jacobs said he didn't want to be bothered with him even if Routis insisted that he might be convinced into the featherweight championship.

Maybe Jacobs didn't pay $50,000 for Delaney but what he got in Delaney was no bargain at any price.

But what was thrown to him in Routis will bring Joe enough to get him an overcoat for the winter and the breezes are cold on the street corners where Joe had to do his work last winter.

When It Looked As-Though Cards Might Win

Cardinal hopes were high when this picture was taken at St. Louis Sunday afternoon in the third game of the 1928 edition of the world series. The picture shows Andy High and Frankie Frisch crossing the plate after "Sunny Jim" Bottomley had gotten next to a fast one and laid it out for a triple. The play occurred in the very first inning of the game and gave the Cards an early lead. However, leads mean nothing to the Yanks and they came from behind to cop the game, 7 to 3.

MARQUETTE MEETS DRAKE SATURDAY

Murray Spending Time Ironing Out Weaknesses Vikings Found

Milwaukee—(AP)—Flaws which presented themselves as the Marquette university Golden Avalanche rumbled over Lawrence college, 19 to 7, at Appleton, on Saturday are being smoothed out in this week's workouts of Frank Murray's eleven in preparation for Saturday's scrap here with the Drake Bulldogs.

The Des Moines team looms as a real threat as a result of a decisive impressive 40 to 6 win over Simpson college, a game which was played behind floodlights, Saturday night.

Coach Oddie Solem has a veteran eleven, composed mostly of the huskies who went out to Los Angeles last November and trimmed California.

This will be the first meeting in football between Marquette and Drake and is the first of five games which the Golden Avalanche is to play this fall with Missouri Valley representatives. The others are Oklahoma Aggies, Grinnell, Kansas and Iowa State.

Coach Murray and his assistants this week are working their tackle material overtime in an effort to develop a good combination and they also are stressing forward pass defense. Drake formations are being tried by the freshmen against the varsity.

Bob Crowley, regular right halfback and Art Bultman, 190 pound reserve center, who were hurt in the Lawrence game, will be able to play against Drake, according to Trainer Kay Iverson.

And while the Murrays are working on Drake plays, Drake is working on Marquette plays and formations. A Drake scout was in the stands here during Saturday's game and he took home plenty of notes.

RIPON IN BAD WAY BECAUSE OF BRUISES

Redmen Correct Cornell Faults and Get Ready for Northwestern

Ripon—Minus the services of two veteran backs and an end, who are all on the shelf with injuries, Coach Carl Boehling's squad featured plenty Monday as the remains of a Ripon college eleven were driven through a long drill in a late afternoon shower.

The Cornell fracas last Saturday not only proved the weakness of Ripon's inexperienced line, but also extracted its toll in injuries. Coach Boehling's squad featured plenty Monday as the remains of a Ripon college eleven were driven through a long drill in a late afternoon shower.

APPLETON YACHT CLUB REMODELS CLUBHOUSE

The club house of the Appleton Yacht club at the foot of S. Pierce Ave. has been moved out into the Fox river 30 feet and is mounted on a wood carport constructed of heavy timber and rocks, to comply with the wishes of the city street department according to officials of the club.

The department will widen River Rd from the foot of S. Pierce Ave west to the residential district on the river bank.

Members of the club are remodeling the house and are building new equipment for moving boats in and out of the structure. They also are working on three new boats which they expect to have completed before navigation on the river closes.

They expect to finish a private dock on the south end of the club house soon.

The membership campaign will start next week, according to members of the club. A bowling team has been organized and will start rolling next week. Members of the team are Herbert Brock, William Bendel, Steve Gehrmann and Carl Kempf.

Gridders Idle When Rain Soaks Up Fields

Rain kept college, high school and junior high gridgers off the green Monday but to the Vikings of Lawrence college it meant nothing for they previously had been given the day off by Coach Clarence H. Rasmussen. Joseph Shields at the high school was the mentor who chafed for he has plenty of information to hand out to his, otters.

The day off for the Vikings was just a gift to keep them from going stale. Coach Rasmussen is almost entirely satisfied with them and they probably won't see many heavy drill sessions after this week.

All the squad is in top-top condition physically and with a touchdown scored against the Golden Avalanche they feel they're going to run all over a lot of teams in the state this year.

When practice is resumed Tuesday evening Eddie Kotal will be given the backfielders and will try to teach them a few of the tricks he knows when carrying the ball.

Coach Rasmussen isn't satisfied at the speed the backs get started and if they appear to be doing dance steps this week it's just a case of getting the right foot off first of a getaway.

"Razz" will talk things over with his linemen and show them a few weaknesses he noticed Saturday afternoon. There probably will be only one scrimmage session during the week for Rasmussen is not a believer in long drill periods and heavy scrimmages. When they learn his system and its fine points they won't need scrimmage to put the finishing touches on their ability.

The men probably will be given a few new plays and will drill on those they now know taking their "con-founded good natured time" and doing them by the numbers.

"Razz" is a great believer in the slow motion stuff and with the great showing Saturday, it apparently works. Saturday the Vikings play Carleton at Northfield, Minn.

Joseph Shields who worries about Appleton high school footballers is doing plenty of thinking. He admits his line showed weaknesses Saturday against Fond du Lac but he'll try to find a remedy by Saturday when the "otter" met West Green Bay on Whiting field.

Mel Heinritz, coach of St. Joseph junior high team also is wondering about a lot of things this week for his gridgers will go into their first Catholic junior conference game next Sunday afternoon here.

The youngsters were defeated last week by the high school G team and have several faults which need correcting.

BADGERS TALK OVER NOTRE DAME GAME

Start Preparing for Purdue,
Oct. 20; Practice Games
Saturday

Madison.—(P)—Like its most prominent former student, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, the university of Wisconsin as circled by its football team continues unabashed and modest.

Fresh after their stalling 22 to 6 victory over Notre Dame Saturday, uninjured except for bruises, the 40 members of the Badger varsity started working toward the opening Big Ten encounter with Purdue which is scheduled at LaFayette for Oct. 20.

All eyes to the future is the word. Notre Dame is forgotten for this season—such is the psychological attitude of the Wisconsin team and with this in view the squad wasted no time swinging into action in preparation with the highly touted Indians.

Saturday the Badgers are to play a double header with Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Ia., and the North Dakota Aggies from Fargo. Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite has not announced which will be the foe of the varsity.

Practice Monday afternoon was light. After warming up drills, the coach drew his team to a secluded spot, meticulously went over the game with the rambles from South Bend, and demonstrated weaknesses and offered remedies. Later the squad went through a long signal and passing drill and then called it a day.

Meanwhile the "B" team had a rugged practice under the coach's preparation for the first game that the seconds will play.

SUNSET PLAYERS WILL HOLD FINAL TRY-OUTS

Seventeen men and 18 women were chosen out of 94 to compete in the final try-outs for Sunset Players, campus dramatic organization, which will be held in the little theatre of Lawrence Memorial chapel Tuesday afternoon.

Those who survived the first round were Alois Fischl, Henry Berzinsky, Norma Balgie, Josephine Dieckhoff, Gertrude Weber, Florence French, George Kelley, Richard Maloney, Robert Beggs, Dorothy Zillich, Lois Kloehn, Cussie Ryan, Charles Barnes, Lucille Ganne, Arthur Steinhaus, Carleton Roth, Ellen White, Mabel Renner, Julia Ladwig, Lynn Handrade, Elaine Ackerman, Timothy Enright, Maxwell McCormack, Don McMahon, Harold Breen, Margaret Keller, Edwin Meyer, Irma Molow, Ardis Elston, Mildred Schultz.

The judges at the try-outs were Miss Lucille Welty, instructor in dramatic art, Miss Helen Holton, instructor in French, Warren Beck, and Professor F. W. Clippinger of the faculty; and Eleanor Lea, Agnes Macinnis, and Kenneth Miles, of the student members of the group.

Of the 35 left from the first series, 15 or 20 will be selected for active membership in the club.

FINISH FOUNDATION FOR FOUNDRY BUILDING

Work on the new Appleton Machine company foundry building under construction on S. Oneida-st., north of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad depot, is progressing rapidly. The foundation for the pattern sections and the main foundry building has been completed and work on the walls is nearing completion. The structure will be of face brick. The main foundry building will be entirely enclosed in steel so as to allow plenty of light for workmen, according to officials of the company.

HEARING IS PLANNED ON BUILDING CODES

A public hearing on changes in the state building code will be held at the city hall at 4 p.m. tomorrow, according to word received by John N. Wieland, city building inspector. The change is relative to substituting automatic sprinkler systems on steel work in public garages for the concrete fireproofing now required by the statutes.

The state building code now requires that all steel work in garages be fire proofed by concrete covering at least two inches in thickness or with a similar substance three inches thick. The industrial commission now is considering permitting automatic sprinkler systems on the steel work instead of concrete.

NO LEGIONAIRES ARE GOING TO CONVENTION

Oney Johnston post of the American Legion probably will not be represented at the national convention at San Antonio, Texas, according to reports. The convention will be held Oct. 11, 12 and 13. Many Wisconsin posts will be at the convention, however, and several special trains will take the Badger state contingents south. The Racine drum corps and other state musical organizations are planning on making the trip. Local legionnaires feel they'll wait until the convention is held nearer home.

Mr. Ingler discussed various school problems and outlined ways in which they could be remedied. Mr. Ingler will speak to the Parent-Teachers Association of Crandon at 7:30 Monday evening on the objects of the association.

Nothing Wrong With the Babe Here

Here's a picture of Babe Ruth slidding home in that weird sixth inning of Sunday's world series game at St. Louis. Babe had been on second and Gehrig on first when a ball was hit to short and tossed to Frisch at second to force Gehrig. Frank then tossed wild to first to get Meusel, the batter and the Babe who had gone to third started for home. Bottomley's throw beat him but Catcher Wilson dropped the ball. Apparently Babe's sore leg didn't prevent his "hitting the dirt."

Estimate Majors Will Spend Several Hundred Thousand and for Talent

New York.—Club owners in the International League estimate that major league clubs will have paid close to one-half million dollars for players of that circuit during the 1928 season, including drafted players.

Jack Dunn alone expects to realize $200,000 from sale of his stars this year. He has sent George Earnshaw to the Athletics and has sold Pitcher Bolen to the same club. Earnshaw is said to have brought something like $130,000 and Bolen should bring $40,000 in cash and players. He also has sold Pitcher Cantrell to Washington and he hopes to get rid of Dick Porter. In all, about $200,000 worth of ivory.

Toronto has four stars on the market with heavy price tags attached. Dale Alexander and Johnny Prudhomme are the ones most eagerly sought but the rumor goes that Detroit has bought Alexander and the Yankees Prudhomme. They also ask a wad of dough for Shedy and Bedore.

Two clubs in the league, Reading and Rochester, have a number of young players who are going up but these clubs are possessions of the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs, respectively, and the cash receipts won't be so high.

But with what the Toronto and Baltimore and other clubs will sell, the ivory trade should net International League owners close to $500,000 this year. And that's not bad at all.

With Grady Adkins limiting the Cubs to six hits, the White Sox pounded Guy Bush, Charlie Root and Hat Carlson for 14 safeties, piling up their runs in the first three innings.

Sheriff Fred Blake, who pitched the Bruins to one victory over the southsiders, was manager Joe McCarthy's choice in Tuesday's finale while Ted Lyons was expected to toil for the White Sox.

Well—the nice old rusty leave time is here again and makes us think of pumpkin pie, apple cider and Halloween—spooks. Inspired by these thoughts we made up a "poem" about leaves:

Come on now, roll up your sleeves. Get busy raking up the leaves. And you'll be rewarded, bye and bye. With apple rider and pumpkin pie.

Just because the weather has been a little warmer these last few days, don't think it's going to last. Better call us up and order your coal now—then you can laugh at the weather forecast—"snow and colder."

TOWNSCHILDREN'S CODE IS DISCUSSED BY
NEW LONDON NURSEMiss Loretta Rice Points
Out Need to Provide for Unwanted Children

New London—In her explanation of the Children's Code as adopted by the State Board of Control of Wisconsin, Miss Loretta Rice, city nurse, read and discussed the fundamental workings of the code before a group of the New London Civic Improvement League at the city hall on Monday evening.

The exchange of the most inconsequential vacant lot sold in Wisconsin made by legally recorded and a deed made and signed, but any mother who wishes to do so may give away to the most undesirable, mercenary person imaginable her unwanted child, and no legal record is asked of her, Miss Rice pointed out. There is no state legislature which governs or gives recognition of the rights of every child to maintenance, well being, the safeguarding of his health and his future education. Thousands of illegitimate children are brought into the state every year, the speaker continued many of whom have no place whatever on the roads of Wisconsin.

A state board of control and experts, advocating the children's code, maintain that every child should have the care of parents, should share like privileges and grow up. "But," the speaker asked, "what can the board do, how can they reach the parents in such cases, when without legislation the unmarried parents are totally unknown and no record is forthcoming from the birth records?"

WHERE CRIME IS BORN
It is out of these ranks of little waifs, reared in unscrupulous, unwholesome homes, Miss Rice affirmed, that come the delinquents, victims of maladjustment, who fill the juvenile courts, the industrial schools and through various avenues become charges of the state.

A digest of what the state of Minnesota, one of the leaders in administration of the code, has done through the state board of control, was given by Mrs. Milton Ullrich, who pointed out the branches of work covered among children of like circumstances in that state. The establishment of the boarding home, and of many hospitals where young mothers are being encouraged to retain their children, and the success of boarding homes were discussed in detail.

Informal discussion of the many problems confronted in this county and city followed, and Miss Rice gave interesting angles of her work, in which she meets the type of people whose names are for a part of each year on the payrolls of city charity. Miss Rice and others stressed the need of the establishing of a branch of the associated charities and of a probation officer to maintain a strict check over such cases.

POSTAL HEAD SEES AIRMAIL SERVICE TO ALL BIG CITIES

New Visions Network of Lines Serving Entire United States

EDITOR'S NOTE: In this article, written especially for Post-Crescent and NEA Service, Postmaster General Harry S. New forecasts the future of commercial aviation in America and tells why he thinks this form of transportation is due for a great boom.

BY HARRY S. NEWS

Postmaster General
To look into the future and visualize just what will happen in any given line of human endeavor is a faculty possessed, if at all, by few mortals. It is true that by looking back and recalling what has occurred in the past, it is sometimes possible to gauge fairly accurately what the future may have in store.

Knowing what we do, therefore, about the development of rail transportation, and of steamship lines, and the phenomenal growth of the automobile industry, it would seem the wisest pessimism to predict any but a glowing future for commercial aviation.

I firmly believe in the future of the air service. The feasibility of the airplane has long ago been demonstrated and every-day improvements make it more and more practical as a means for the quick movement over long distances of mail, express and of passengers.

To the next generation the airplane, in my opinion, will have become as indispensable as is the railroad train, the trolley car or the family automobile to this one. The transition will not come at one fell swoop, but with continued world peace, will grow and expand rapidly like a field of delta corn in favorable weather.

WE'RE LEARNING FAST

It is true that the American public has not yet "taken" to the air as a means of passenger transport to the extent to which their European cousins are patronizing this method of getting from one place to another. With the advent, however, of private initiative carrying mail and express on regular schedules over regular routes with the reliability of established train service, I am of the opinion that only a short time will intervene before the American public will sprout its wings and surpass the migratory tendencies of the same species on the older continent.

Familiarity with the time-saving powers of the airplane, and a better knowledge of the safety of the air vehicles as compared with other means of travel are the two essentials most needed now.

With the continued and growing use of existing air lines between distant points for the movement, not only of mail and express, but of passengers, I can picture a swift expansion of these routes in no very distant future until every geographical division of the United States will be linked up, both east and west and north and south, with every other section.

At the same time considerable progress will have been made toward connecting air links between countries in both North and South America so that the airplane will come into the field of its greatest usefulness—that of the long haul.

OCEAN FLIGHTS MUST WAIT

The plane will also play a conspicuous part in reducing transport time between the two hemispheres, but the tragic conclusions of a number of trans-Atlantic flights have taught us that we are not yet ready for anything like a regular overseas service. I am convinced that even this will come eventually, but to hazard a guess as to how long it will take to devise steps of the air capable of conquering the wide and stormy reaches of the ocean as a matter of daily performance would be foolhardy.

We should first direct our undivided attention toward perfecting the service on land—and I am frank in saying that it is today far from being perfect. There are many obstacles, resulting in delays and sometimes in serious accidents, which time and invention alone must overcome.

Over a long route there is very often a spot each day where weather conditions present difficulties and the pilots are confronted with atmospheric conditions, including fog, that too often it has gained over other methods of transportation. These kinks must be ironed out of the system and weather obstacles must be overcome to attain the public confidence necessary for successful service.

RATE CUT WAS HELP

The greatest step toward popularizing the air mail in America was the reduction of the postage rate to five cents for the first ounce. August, the first month the new rate was operative produced an increase of 25 per cent, or almost double the postage carried in July.

It is my earnest conviction that succeeding months will bring about a gradual mounting total of air mail poundage that will justify the inclusion in the system during the next twelve months of points not now considered as sufficiently productive from the mail standpoint to be made air mail stops.

All of the twenty odd air mail contractors are very busy laying plans for larger and more efficient shops for handling the great increased loads they visualize for the near future. The August increase taxed their present equipment to capacity. They are confronted, however, with the realization that regardless of size of new ships placed in operation still larger ships must be devised, persons before the others have served their period of usefulness. It is a problem which also is being shared by the airplane manufacturers and one which must be worked out simultaneously with the growth of the air mail.

NEED MORE AIRWAYS

The growth will be restricted only by the speed with which lighted airways for night flying and adequate landing fields are constructed.

The suggestion that air post clerks be provided to sort and distribute mail aloft in the same way that it is distributed on train by railway postal clerks and on ocean

CAPITOL TO MISS J. L. JOHNS, SAYS MADISON WRITER

Colonel J. L. Johns, Appleton attorney and private secretary to Governor Fred R. Zimmerman, will be one of the men appointed by the governor whom Madison will miss when he leaves, according to a writer in a Madison newspaper. The writer says Mr. Johns is a man of ability who has placed his impression on Madison. "By many, it is believed," the writer says, "that if Mr. Johns had been private secretary to the governor during the early part of his administration Governor Zimmerman would have been saved many of the mistakes of the early period of his regime."

vessels by the sea post clerks, is one which will come with time. It is not going to be very long before the air post clerk will be a necessity. Already three of the larger airplane manufacturing companies have submitted plans for mail planes providing space for clerks and equipment for sorting the mail en route.

HIGH SCHOOL BAND TWICE AS LARGE AS THAT OF LAST YEAR

Organization Now Has 60
Pieces—Wind Instruments
Are Added

With a 60-piece band now practicing, Appleton high school band is twice the size it was last year, according to E. C. Moore, director of instrumental music in the public schools. The size of the orchestra, which last year was composed of only string instruments, also has increased with the introduction of wood wind and brass instruments.

The representation of instruments in the band is as follows: 10 cornets, five French horns, six trombones, two baritone, four basses, three saxophones, one alto and one bass clarinet, three flutes, two oboes, two bassoons, 18 clarinets, four drums and tympani. In the orchestra there are five first violins and six second violins, three violas, two cellos, two string basses, one flute, two clarinets, two cornets, two trombones, piano and drum.

The effect of the teaching of instrumental music in junior high school last year is showing in the size of the high school classes this year, according to Mr. Moore. Before the year is out the director hopes to have 36 instrument players in each of the grades from the seventh to the twelfth, so that five years from now the music students in the twelfth grade will have seen five years of steady practice. When this becomes a reality Mr. Moore hopes to combine the orchestras of the eleventh and twelfth grades into a

For COLDS of All the Family

This Modern External Treatment is best

Mothers prefer the external treatment, Vicks VapoRub, for children's colds, because it avoids the constant "dosing" so disturbing to delicate little stomachs. You just rub it on throat and chest.

Other members of the family prefer Vicks for their own colds, because it is convenient, and quick in bringing relief. Colds usually yield overnight.
